Criminology and Criminal Justice

New Titles and Key Backlist 2012

www.routledge.com/criminology
This new and expanded edition builds upon material from the highly successful first edition. A comprehensive textbook on the criminal justice system, the book assesses the main theories concerned with the causes of crime (including white-collar and corporate crime), discusses the operation of all key criminal justice agencies — including the police, probation and prison services and the legal and youth justice systems — and identifies the main themes underpinning contemporary criminal justice policy. Key additions include:

- updated material from the first edition incorporating changes to criminal justice policy introduced by the 2010 Coalition government
- a new chapter that presents an overview of the criminal justice system
- discussions of the evolving EU criminal justice system and the implications of this for UK criminal justice policy.

The book is an ideal text for students taking courses in criminal justice, or studying criminal justice as a component of a broader course in criminology or the social sciences and practitioners within these fields. It is written in a highly accessible manner and has a wide range of features that include:

- questions
- key chapter themes

The Routledge Handbook of European Criminology

EDITED BY SOPHIE BODY-GENDROT, RENÉ LÉVY, MIKE HOUGH, SONJA SNACKEN AND KLARA KEREZSI

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

This new book speaks to the need for a truly comparative and interdisciplinary companion to the state of the art of European criminology. In contrast to more Anglo-American focused offerings, the editors have assembled a cast of leading voices to reflect on differences, elaborate on theoretically grounded comparisons and reflect on emerging themes in criminology in Europe. The main aim of the book is to emphasize what European criminology is and what the institutional variations in legal definitions and responses reveal.

The editors have selected key contributors to reflect on a range of topics:

- An historical, theoretical and policy oriented overview of European issues in crime and crime control,
- Descriptions and explanations for varieties of crime in Europe, including issues such as state crime, crime measurement, gender and crime and urban safety
- Possible explanations for the variety of institutional responses, exploring issues such as policing, juvenile justice, punishment, green crime and the role of the victim
- Concluding chapters reflecting on pan-European trends and how Europe compares with the rest of the world.

This book will be vital reading for students, researchers and scholars of criminology across Europe as well as those interested in a comparative approach to the study of crime in Europe.

INTRODUCTION TO CRIMINOLOGY TEXTBOOKS

BESTSELLER

Key Readings in Criminology
Edited by Tim Newburn, London School of Economics and Political Science, UK

“It’s a terrific collection and nothing nearly as good exists elsewhere.” – Jonathan Simon, University of California Berkeley

Key Readings in Criminology provides a comprehensive single-volume collection of readings in criminology. It provides students with convenient access to a broad range of excerpts (over 150 readings) from original criminological texts and key articles, and is designed to be used either as a stand-alone text or in conjunction with the same author’s textbook, Critical Criminology. This volume can be used in a number of ways in support of the study of criminology:

- as a source of both ‘key’ and supplementary reading for lectures
- as the basis for organized reading in advance of seminars and tutorials
- as the basis for classroom discussion and analysis
- as a broad source of reading for exam revision
- in addition it provides students with access to a broad range of materials with which to follow up their reading of their main textbook

Includes readings that include both more recent summaries of particular important criminological issues as well as excerpts from criminological classics

- introduces students not only to criminological argument and debate but also encourages them to read primary as well as secondary or summary sources.

BESTSELLER

Criminology
Tim Newburn, London School of Economics and Political Science, UK

“Newburn’s distinctive accomplishment in this book is the combination of accessibility and scholarship, achieving (near comprehensive) breadth without compromise to depth.... It is not easy to think of another criminologist who could have managed this nor a better single volume to put in the hands of a criminology student.” – Professor Rob Canton, De Montfort University, UK

This is a comprehensive introduction to criminology for students who are either new or relatively new to the subject. It provides the basis of study for undergraduate students, new postgraduate students, and those who need a foundation knowledge of criminology for other relevant courses – including access and foundation degree courses in colleges and universities, courses in law, probation, policing, criminal and forensic investigation and on other aspects of crime and the criminal justice system. Key points include:

- fully comprehensive – covering all major areas of criminology and criminal justice as well as guidance on dissertation/long-essay writing
- authoritative – written by a leading criminologist and experienced teacher
- broad approach – moves beyond sociological approaches to crime and criminal justice to take account of the contribution of other disciplines
- up-to-date – informed by QAA subject benchmarks for the teaching of criminology
- extensively illustrated with photographs, charts, tables and diagrams and a range of questions for students to discuss and debate
- additional website support for students and teachers.

EDITORS’ NOTE

Dear Reader,

We are delighted to welcome you to the Criminology Catalogue 2012. There was a fascinating article on the radical overhaul of Operations Trident by the Metropolitan Police, which was posted as a link on the Routledge Twitter page (@Routledge_Crim). This has become a great place to keep up to date with criminology and all of the latest books and offers from Routledge.

We have a fantastic year ahead of publishing in criminology both in the UK and US at Routledge. As well as a brand new edition of Peter Joyce’s Criminal Justice (page 4) textbook later in the year, we have a major new Handbook in Surveillance Studies (page 9) edited by Kirstie Ball, Kevin Haggerty and David Lyon and some fantastic additions to the Key Ideas in Criminology series, including Claire Renzetti’s long awaited Feminist Criminology (page 15). We are also very excited about our new titles, Voices from Criminal Justice (page 6), When Crime Appears (page 36), and A Theory of African American Offending (page 16).

We are particularly thrilled this year about commissioning new titles for a brand new series we are launching, New Directions in Critical Criminology (page 6) is edited by Walter DeKeseredy and aims to offer short original contributions to a major contemporary issue of central concern to critical criminologists around the world and set out an agenda for progressive ways of thinking critically about crime, law, and social control (please contact Tom Sutton for more details).

It is a constant pleasure to work with such a fantastic bunch of authors and series editors. As always, we’d be happy to hear from you if you had a new idea for a book or any feedback about the list in general.

Thanks,

Tom Sutton

An Introduction to Criminological Theory

Roger Hopkins-Burke, Nottingham Trent University, UK

This book is an ideal text for students taking courses in criminology at both undergraduate and postgraduate level.

The text is divided into five parts, the first three of which address ideal type models of criminal behaviour: the rational actor, predestined actor, and victimized actor models. Within these the various criminological theories are located chronologically in the context of one of these different traditions, and the strengths and weaknesses of each theory and model are clearly identified. The fourth part of the book looks more closely at some recent attempts to integrate theoretical elements from both within and across models of criminal behaviour, while the fifth part addresses a number of key recent concerns of criminology – postmodernism, cultural criminology, globalization and communitarianism.

White Collar Crime
An Opportunity Perspective
Michael Benson and Sally S. Simpson
Series: Criminology and Justice Studies
This book explains to students why white-collar crime is so prevalent and so difficult to control. Using this text, instructors can show students how these crimes are carried out in ways that make them difficult to discover. Instructors can also show how opportunities for white-collar crimes could be reduced if we were to approach the problem from the perspective of situational crime prevention. The authors address the difficulty of controlling white-collar crime in detail, and speculate on the future of white-collar crime in the rapidly globalizing world of trans-national corporations.

Routledge Handbook of Deviant Behavior

Edited by Clifton D. Bryant, Virginia Tech University, USA

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

The Handbook of Deviant Behavior presents a comprehensive, integrative, and accessible overview of the contemporary body of knowledge in the field of social deviance in the twenty-first century. This book addresses the full range of scholarly concerns within this area— including theoretical, methodological, in over seventy original entries, written by an international mix of recognized scholars. Each of these essays provides insight not only into the historical and sociological evolution of the topic addressed, but also highlights associated notable thinkers, research findings, and key published works for further reference. As a whole, this Handbook undertakes an in-depth evaluation of the contemporary state of knowledge within the area of social deviance, and beyond this considers future directions and concerns that will engage scholars in the decades ahead. The inclusion of comparative and cross-cultural examples and discussions, relevant case studies and other pedagogical features make this book an invaluable learning tool for undergraduate and post graduate students in disciplines such as criminology, mental health studies, criminal theory, and contemporary sociology.

Lucia Zedner

Series: Key Ideas in Criminology

Today security is a central theme in criminology, as security governs our lives, governing security becomes a priority. This important text provides an authoritative introduction to security, serving simultaneously as an introduction and as a timely reflection upon the significance, implications, and dangers of ‘security’.

Handbook of Human Rights

Edited by Thomas Cushman, Wellesley College, USA

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

The Handbook maps out the field of human rights for the humanities and social sciences. It provides a solid foundation for the reader who wants to learn the basic parameters of the field, but also to promote new thinking and frameworks for the future study of human rights in the twenty-first century.

Routledge Handbook of International Criminology

Edited by Cindy J. Smith, University of Baltimore, USA, Sheldon X. Zhang, San Diego State University, USA and Rosemary Barberet, John Jay College of Criminal Justice, USA

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

This Handbook showcases the latest thinking and findings from a group of senior and promising young scholars around the world who have come together in an effort to broaden our perspectives in understanding crime and social control across borders and nationalities. It is divided into three parts, in which three distinct but overlapping types of crime are presented and discussed: international crime, transnational crime, and national crime.

NEW
Indigenous People, Crime and Punishment
Thalia Anthony, University of Sydney, Australia

Indigenous People, Crime and Punishment examines criminal sentencing courts’ changing characterisations of Indigenous peoples’ identity, culture and postcolonial status. Focusing largely on Australian Indigenous peoples, but referring also to the Canadian and New Zealand experiences, Thalia Anthony critically analyzes how the judiciary have interpreted Indigenous difference. Through an analysis of Indigenous sentencing decisions and remarks over a fifty year period in a number of jurisdictions, the book demonstrates how discretion is moulded to cultural assumptions about Indigenousity. More specifically, Indigenous People, Crime and Punishment shows how the incalculable demonization of Indigenous criminality and culture in sentencing has turned earlier ‘gains’ in the legal recognition of Indigenous peoples on their head. The recognition of Indigenous difference is thereby revealed as a pliable concept that is as likely to remove rights as it is to grant them.

New Directions in Criminological Theory
Edited by Steve Hall, University of Teeside and Simon Winlow, University of York, UK

This edited collection brings together established global scholars and new thinkers to outline fresh concepts and hypothetical perspectives for criminological research and analysis in the twenty-first century. Criminologists from the UK, USA, Canada and Australia evaluate the current condition of criminological theory and present students and researchers with new and revised ideas from the realms of politics, culture and subjectivity to unpack crime and violence in the precarious age of global neoliberalism.

Applied Statistics for the Social and Health Sciences

Rachel A. Gordon, University of Illinois, USA

This book is for use in a two-semester graduate course sequence covering basic univariate and bivariate statistics and regression models for nominal and ordinal outcomes, as well as ordinary least squares regression. Key features of the book include:

- interweaving the teaching of statistical concepts with examples developed for the course from publicly-available social science data or drawn from the literature
- thorough integration of teaching statistical theory with teaching data processing and analysis
- teaching of both SAS and Stata "side-by-side" and use of chapter exercises in which students practice programming and interpretation on the same data set and course exercises in which students can choose their own research questions and data set.

Sociologists Backstage

Answers to 10 Questions About What They Do

Sarah Fenstermaker and Nikki Jones, both at University of California, Santa Barbara, USA

Series: Contemporary Sociological Perspectives

Published social science rarely gives real attention to the actual doing of research, making the process appear magical, or at least self-evident and simple. This book is intended to right the balance by illuminating the craft and the choices made as the research process unfolds for the sociologist. The metaphorical image of going ‘backstage’ speaks to the reader’s experience with each of the seventeen interviews, which illuminate the choices and constraints of researchers as well as unanticipated developments, good and bad. The volume represents a range of interests, themes, research philosophies and approaches from a diverse group of contributors. Particularly suited for advanced undergraduate and graduate research methods students, the volume addresses virtually all of the most vexing methods questions through accessible and compelling first-hand descriptions of sociological research. The volume is an invaluable addition to the library of all social science researchers.

Contemporary Critical Theory and Methodology

Piet Strydom, University College Cork, Ireland
Series: Social Research Today

In this book, Piet Strydom presents a groundbreaking treatment of critical theory's methodology, using as a base the reconstruction of the left-Hegelian tradition, the relation between critical theory and pragmatism, and the associated metatheoretical implications. He assesses extant positions, presents a detailed yet comprehensive restatement and development of critical theory's methodology, compares it with a wide range of current concepts of social criticism and critique, and analyzes leading critical theorists' exemplary applications of it. Besides immanent transcendence and the sign-mediated epistemology common to the left-Hegelian tradition, special attention is given to the abductive imagination, reconstruction, normative and causal explanation, explanatory mechanisms and the communicative framework which enables critical theory to link up with its addressees and the public.

Contemporary Critical Theory and Methodology is recommended reading for senior undergraduate and postgraduate students, as well as professionals working within disciplines such as sociology, philosophy, political science, critical theory and cultural studies.

Sex, Crime and Morality

Sharon Hayes, Belinda Carpenter and Angela Dwyer, all at Queensland University of Technology, Australia

Within modern democratic nations, there are a specific group of offences which bear the brunt of the label ‘crimes against morality’. These include offences related to prostitution and pornography, homosexuality, incest, and child sexual abuse. This book examines the historical, anthropological and moral reasons for such differentiations in contemporary western culture.

Social Class and Crime

A Biosocial Approach

Anthony Walsh, Boise State University, USA
Series: Routledge Advances in Criminology

This book takes a look at the class-crime relationship written from a biosocial perspective, a perspective that views nature and nurture as the heads and tails of our development and of our existence. Using concepts and data from genetics, neurobiology, and evolutionary biology, it explores the closely-linked risk factors common both to failing to achieve occupational success and to criminal behavior.

Changing Times for Black Professionals

Adia Harvey Wingfield, Georgia State University, USA

This book is a study of the challenges, issues, and obstacles facing black professional workers in the United States. Though they have always been a part of the U.S. labor force, black professionals have often been overlooked in media, research, and public opinion. Ironically, however, their experiences offer a particularly effective way to understand how race shapes social life, opportunities, and upward mobility.

The White Racial Frame
Centuries of Racial Framing and Counter-Framing
Joe R. Feagin, Texas A&M University, USA

"Joe Feagin’s book could not be more timely or important. The ‘white racial frame’ is an analytic tool of great precision, deployed here both for a fresh and challenging look at American history, and for exciting proposals for more productive forms of education about race and racism." – Jane H. Hill, Anthropology, Emerita University of Arizona

This book examines how and why this white racial frame emerged in North America, how and why it has evolved socially over time, which racial groups are framed within it, how it has operated in the past and in the present for both white Americans and Americans of color, and how the latter have long responded with strategies of resistance that include enduring counter-frames.

YES We CAN!
White Racial Framing and the 2008 Presidential Campaign
Adia Harvey-Wingfield and Joe R. Feagin

"Debunking the whitewashed illusion that we are living in a ‘post-racial’ America, the authors convincingly demonstrate that race continues to play a fundamental role shaping U.S. politics by placing the Obama Presidential campaign at the center of analysis. An excellent overview of how race and racism play out in contemporary U.S. society" – Jake Alimahomed-Wilson, Sociology, California State University, Long Beach

For readers and scholars who are interested in a sociologically-grounded assessment of the historic presidential campaign of 2008, this book provides such an analysis.

Hopeful Girls, Troubled Boys
Race and Gender Inequality in Urban Education
Nancy Lopez, University of New Mexico, USA

An exciting revision of a classic book, Hopeful Girls, Troubled Boys focuses on the life histories of the largest immigrant group in New York City, the youth from the Dominican Republic, the West Indies, and Haiti, to explain why girls of color are succeeding at higher rates than their male counterparts. Nancy Lopez brings to life the attitudes, feelings, and expectations of these teens, and shows that girls maintain optimistic outlooks on their lives, while boys are ambivalent about the promises of education. This fascinating account explains how and why our schools and cities are failing boys of color.

Operation Gatekeeper and Beyond
The War On ‘Illegals’ and the Remaking of the U.S. – Mexico Boundary

Joseph Nevins, Vassar College, USA

This is a major revision and update of Nevins’ earlier classic and is an ideal text for use with undergraduate students in a wide variety of courses on immigration, transnational issues, and the politics of race, inclusion and exclusion. Not only has the author brought his subject completely up to date, but as a ‘case’ of increasing economic integration and liberalization along with growing immigration control, the US / Mexico Border and its history is put in a wider global context of similar development s elsewhere.

Feminist Criminology

Claire M. Renzetti, University of Kentucky, USA

Feminist criminology grew out of the Women’s Movement of the 1970s in response to the neglect of women by, and the male dominance of, mainstream criminology. This important volume traces the development of feminist criminology and assesses its impact on the discipline. Examining the development of feminist theoretical perspectives and empirical research in criminology, this key book investigates their impact on research methods and topics, pedagogy, and curriculum and employment in academic and criminal justice professions.

Claire M. Renzetti considers the potential for feminist criminology to transform the discipline, making it more progressive by including, as a central principle, the need to analyze intersecting inequalities, especially those of gender, race and class, in order to fully understand both crime and justice. She skilfully gives a balanced view of the subject, incorporating both the successes and failures of feminist criminology and provides an extensive, up-to-date bibliography which allows criminology students to access, for their own research purposes, the large body of feminist criminological literature.

Selected Contents:
1. Emergence of Feminist Criminology
2. Feminist Criminology at the Close of the Twentieth Century
3. Feminist Criminology in the Twenty-First Century
4. Assessing the Impact of Feminist Criminology in Academe
5. Assessing the Impact of Feminist Criminology in Criminal Justice Practice

Routledge International Handbook of Crime and Gender Studies

Edited by Claire M. Renzetti, University of Kentucky, USA, Susan Miller, University of Delaware, USA and Angela Gover, University of Colorado, USA

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

The Routledge International Handbook of Crime and Gender Studies presents original essays from scholars from around the world in an effort to broaden our understanding of international issues related to gender and crime. It shows how social variables such as race/ethnicity, social class, sexual orientation, age, and ability status, interact with gender to produce differential outcomes to a particular gender and crime topic.

It introduces up-to-date perspectives within the following six topical areas: theoretical and methodological approaches to the study of gender and crime; gender and victimization; gender and offending; gendered justice; gendered work in the criminal justice system, and future directions in gender and crime research. Additionally, the handbook incorporates international/cross-cultural data and discussion.

The Routledge International Handbook of Crime and Gender Studies is intended for academics, advanced students, researchers, and policy-makers globally.

Selected Contents:
Part 1: Theoretical and Methodological Approaches to the Study of Gender and Crime
1. Historical and International Development
2. Emergence of Feminist Criminology
3. Feminist Theories
4. Ethical Dilemmas in Research, Methodologies Inspired by Feminist Principles, and Innovative Methodologies (Including Ethical Dilemmas in Gender and Crime Research)

Routledge Advances in Ethnography

Dick Hobbs, London School of Economics, UK and Geoffrey Pearson, Goldsmiths University of London, UK

Ethnography is a celebrated, if contested, research methodology that offers unprecedented access to people’s intimate lives, their often hidden social worlds and the meanings they attach to these. The intensity of ethnographic fieldwork often makes considerable personal and emotional demands on the researcher, while the final product is a vivid human document with personal resonance impossible to recreate by the application of any other social science methodology. This series aims to highlight the best, most innovative ethnographic work available from both new and established scholars.

Cultures of Desistance
Rehabilitation, Reintegration and Ethnic Minorities
Adam Calverley, University of Hull, UK
Series: International Series on Desistance and Rehabilitation
Cultures of Desistance explores how structural (families, friends, peer groups, employment, social capital) and cultural (religion, values, recognition) ethnic differences affected the environment in which their desistance took place. For Indians and Bangladeshi desistance was characterized as a collective experience involving their families actively intervening in their lives. In contrast, Black and dual heritage offenders’ desistance was a much more individualistic endeavour. The book suggests a need for a research agenda and justice policy that is sensitive to desisters’ structural location and wider culture that promotes and supports desisters’ efforts.

Eyes Everywhere
The Global Growth of Camera Surveillance
Edited by Aaron Doyle, Carleton University, Canada, Randy Lippert, University of Windsor, Canada and David Lyon, Queen’s University, Canada
Eyes Everywhere provides a first international perspective on the development of camera surveillance. It scrutinizes the quiet but massive expansion of camera surveillance around the world in recent years, focusing especially on Canada, the UK and the USA but also including less-debated but important contexts such as Brazil, China, Japan, Mexico, South Africa and Turkey. Containing both broad overviews and illuminating case-studies, including cameras in taxi-cabs and at mega-events such as the Olympics, the book offers a valuable insight on the status of camera surveillance in the second decade of the twenty-first century.

The book will be fascinating reading for students and scholars of camera surveillance as well as policy makers and practitioners from the police, chambers of commerce, private security firms and privacy- and data-protection agencies.

Contesting the Politics of Genocidal Rape

Affirming the Dignity of the Vulnerable Body

Debra B. Bergoffen, George Mason University, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Gender and Society

When the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) tried and convicted the Bosnian Serb soldiers who raped and sexually enslaved Muslim women and girls, it broke new legal and philosophical ground. In addition to identifying genocidal rape as a crime against humanity, the court, in finding that the rapes violated the women's right to sexual self-determination, created a new human right—the right to sexual integrity. In grounding this human right in a woman's body, a body traditionally gendered and stigmatized as vulnerable, this book argues, the ICTY transformed vulnerability from a sign of shame into a mark of our humanity. Doing this, the court directs us to challenge current meanings of bodily integrity and human dignity so far as they define human rights as protecting the invulnerability of the body rather than as guaranteeing the dignity of the vulnerable body.

Internet and Surveillance

The Challenges of Web 2.0 and Social Media

Edited by Christian Fuchs, Uppsala University, Sweden, Kees Boersma, Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam, the Netherlands, Anders Albrechtslund, Aalborg University, Denmark, and Marisol Sandoval, University of Salzburg, Austria

Series: Routledge Studies in Science, Technology and Society

The Internet has been transformed in the past years from a system primarily oriented on information provision into a medium for communication and community-building. In a world of global economic competition, economic crisis, and fear of terrorism after 9/11, both corporations and state institutions have a growing interest in accessing this personal data. The contributions in this book provide a comprehensive look at issues that are redefining our entire concept of privacy and surveillance.

Prostitution Scandals in China

Policing, Media and Society

Elaine Jeffreys, University of Technology, Sydney, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies on China in Transition

Prostitution Scandals in China presents an examination of media coverage of prostitution-related scandals in contemporary China. It demonstrates that the subject of prostitution is not only widely debated, but also that these public discussions have ramifications for some of the key social, legal and political issues affecting citizens of the PRC. Further, this book shows how these public discussions impact on issues as diverse as sexual exploitation, civil rights, government corruption, child and youth protection, policing abuses, and public health.

Due Process Denied: Detentions and Deportations in the United States

Tanya Golash-Boza, University of Kansas, USA

Series: Framing 21st Century Social Issues

Due Process Denied describes the consequences of this lack of due process through the stories of deportees and detainees. People who have lived nearly all of their lives in the United States have been detained and deported for minor crimes, without regard for constitutional limits on disproportionate punishment. The court's insistence that deportation is not punishment does not align with the experiences of deportees. For many, deportation is one of the worst imaginable punishments.

European Developments in Corporate Criminal Liability

Edited by James Gobert and Ana-Maria Pascal, both at University of Essex, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Criminology

The public outcry against corporate misconduct has never been louder. Union Carbide, Continental Airlines, Enron, Goldman Sachs, and BP find themselves staring at potential criminal prosecutions. The spotlight now focuses on the criminal law and whether it is capable of dealing with these corporate ‘villains.’ This book examines the legal challenges facing the world’s legal systems and analyzes the laws of corporate criminal liability throughout Europe.

The Sociology of Terrorism

People, Places and Processes

Stephen Vertigans, Robert Gordon University, UK

This is the first terrorism textbook based on sociological research. It adopts an innovative framework that draws together historical and modern, local and global, and social processes for a range of individuals, groups and societies. Individual behaviour and dispositions are embedded within these broader relationships and activities, allowing a more holistic account of terrorism to emerge. In addition, the shifting forms of identification and intertwined attitudes to political violence are discussed in order to explain the emergence, continuation, and end of ‘terrorist’ careers.

Suicide Bombings
Riaz Hassan, Flinders University, Australia
Series: Shortcuts

In an age when the Western world is preoccupied with worries about weapons of mass destruction in terrorist hands, terrorists across many parts of the globe are using a more basic device as a weapon—life itself. Suicide bombing has become a weapon of choice among terrorist groups because of its lethality and unvarnished ability to cause mayhem and fear, but what is the real driving force behind these attacks?

For the first time, Suicide Bombings analyzes concrete data from The Suicide Terrorism Database at Flinders University, Australia, to explain what motivates the perpetrators. The results serve to largely discredit common wisdom that religion and an impressionable personality are the principal causes, and show rather that a cocktail of motivations fuel these attacks which include politics, humiliation, revenge, retaliation, and altruism.

Suicide Bombings provides a short but incisive insight into this much publicized form of terrorism, and as such is an informative and engaging resource for students, academics, and indeed anyone with an interest in this topic.

The Corporate Criminal
Steve Tombs, Liverpool John Moores University, UK and David Whyte, Liverpool University, UK
Series: Key Ideas in Criminology

Treating the corporation as if it were a human person is ubiquitous in contemporary political, cultural and legal constructions of the corporation—from the creation of ‘brands’ and the representation of the corporation in fiction, to statutory and common law rules of corporate liability. It dominates both academic approaches and popular representations of the corporation, from discussions of corporate citizenship, corporate social responsibility and ‘corporate greed’.

This book interrogates the concept of corporate ‘personhood’ to understand the nature of corporate criminality and the prospects for more effective corporate control. Linking debates in criminology to broader claims around corporate social responsibility, it provides an understanding of the key ideas that explain the role of the corporation in the global economy.

The Scene of the Mass Crime
History, Film, and International Tribunals
Edited by Peter Goodrich and Christian Delage both at Cardozo Law School, Yeshiva University, USA

The Scene of the Mass Crime takes up the unwritten history of the peculiar yet highly visible form of war crimes trials. These trials are the first and continuing site of the interface of law, history and film. From Nuremberg to the contemporary trials in Cambodia, film, in particular, has been crucial both as evidence of atrocity and as the means of publicizing the proceedings. But what does film bring to justice? Can law successfully address war crimes, atrocities, genocide? What do the trials actually show? What form of justice is done, and how does it relate to ordinary courts and proceedings? What lessons can be drawn from this history for the very topical political issue of filming civil and criminal trials? This book takes up the diversity and complexity of these idiosyncratic and, in strict terms, generally extra-legal medial situations. Drawing on a fascinating diversity of public trials and filmic responses, from the Trial of the Gang of Four to the Gacaca local courts of Rwanda to the filmic symbolism of 9-11, from Soviet era show trials to Nazi People’s Courts leading international scholars address the theatrical, political, political, filmic and symbolic importance of show trials in making history, legitimating regimes and, most surprising of all, in attempting to heal trauma through law and through film. These essays will be of considerable interest to those working on international criminal law, transitional justice, genocide studies, and the relationship between law and film.

Human Trafficking
Exploring the International Nature, Concerns, and Complexities
Edited by John Winterdyk, Mount Royal University, Canada, Benjamin Perrin, University of British Columbia, Canada and Philip Reichel, University of Northern Colorado, USA

Drawing upon original qualitative research with prisoners in three democratic therapeutic communities (TCs), this book provides a unique sociological portrayal and new criminological understanding of the TC’s rehabilitative regime and culture.

Topics discussed include:
• how data on human trafficking should be collected and analyzed, and how data collection can be improved through proper contextualization
• the importance of harmonization and consistency in legal definitions and interpretations within and among regions
• the need for increased exchange of information and cooperation between the various actors involved in combating human trafficking, including investigators, law enforcement and criminal justice professionals, and social workers
• problems with victim identification, as well as erroneous assumptions of the scope of victimization
• controversy over linking protection measures with cooperation with authorities.

Highlighting the issues most addressed by contemporary scholars, researchers, practitioners, and policy-makers, this volume also suggests areas ripe for further inquiry and investigation. Supplemented by discussion questions in each chapter, the book is sure to stimulate debate on a troubling phenomenon.

The Registration and Monitoring of Sex Offenders
A Comparative Study

Terry Thomas, Leeds Metropolitan University, UK

This book seeks to provide the first serious and detailed narrative of the conception and implementation of the sex offender registers. It seeks to do so in a clear and easy to follow text that will be both informed and critical. It will also serve as a resource book for those wanting to make further study of the process of registration and monitoring.

Prison Policy in Ireland
Politics, Penal-Welfarism and Political Imprisonment

Mary Rogan, Dublin Institute of Technology, Ireland

This book explores how Irish prison policy has come to take on its particular character, with comparatively low prison numbers, significant reliance on short sentences and a policy-making climate in which long periods of neglect are interspersed with bursts of political activity all prominent features. Drawing on the emerging scholarship of policy analysis, the book argues that it is only through close attention to the way in which policy is formed that we will fully understand the nature of prison policy.

Ethnography and the City
Readings on Doing Urban Fieldwork
Edited by Richard Ocejo, John Jay College, City University of New York, USA
Series: The Metropoles and Modern Life
Ethnography has been a big part of sociology in the United States since the discipline's inception. Many sociologists in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, such as from the famous University of Chicago, used ethnography to explore their favorite topic—the problems and mysteries of cities and urban life, especially among immigrants and the poor—and understand modern society's impact on social order and community. They established a vibrant practice, outlined a line of inquiry, and laid the intellectual foundation for generations of sociologists around the country and the world to build upon. Today urban ethnographers continue to produce excellent and popular research on a wide range of topics. In spite of this legacy and contemporary interest in urban ethnography, there has yet to be a single volume that collects some of the best work from this discipline's corpus to show how ethnographers do ethnography in the city. This reader, Exploring the City, aims to fill this important gap and make a significant contribution to the discipline itself.

How Ethical Systems Change: Lynching and Capital Punishment
Sheldon Ekland-Olson, University of Texas at Austin, USA and Danielle Dirks, Occidental College, USA
Series: Framing 21st Century Social Issues
Slavery, lynching and capital punishment were intertwined in the United States and by the mid-twentieth century these connections gave rise to a small but well-focused reform movement. Biased and perfunctory procedures were replaced by prolonged trials and appeals, which some found messy and meaningless; DNA profiling clearly established innocent persons had been sentenced to death. The debate over taking life to protect life continues; this book is based on a hugely popular undergraduate course taught at the University of Texas, and is ideal for those interested in criminal justice, social problems, social inequality, and social movements.

The Politics of Organized Crime
Theory and Practice
Sappho Xenakis, London School of Economics, UK
Series: Routledge Transnational Crime and Corruption
Organized crime has become one of most prominent international security concerns of our age. Nevertheless, international efforts to combat it have often been criticized as inadequate, ineffective and illiberal. Combining insights from International Relations and Criminology, this book explains policy against organized crime as a potent means by which state cohesiveness and the authority of state elites are strengthened, a means valid as much for stronger states, internationally and domestically.

The Subject of Prostitution
SexWork, Law and Social Theory
Jane Scoular, University of Strathclyde, UK
The Subject of Prostitution offers a distinctive analysis of the links between prostitution and social theory in order to advance a critical analysis of the relationship of law to sex/work. Using the lens of social theory to disrupt fixed meanings the book provides an advanced analytical framework through which to understand the complexity and contingencies of sexWork in late-modernity. The book analyzes contemporary citizenship discourse and the law's ability to meet the competing demands of empowerment by sexworkers and protection by radical feminists who view prostitution as the epitome of patriarchal sexual and economic relations. Its central focus is the role of law in both structuring and responding to the ‘problem of prostitution’. This is particularly pertinent in a period of unprecedented legal reform, both internationally and nationally, as legal norms simultaneously attempt to protect, empower and criminalize parties involved in the purchase of sexual services.

The Subject of Prostitution aims to provide an advanced theoretical resource for policy-makers, researchers and activists involved in contemporary struggles over the meanings and place of sex/work in late modernity.

Intelligence and Intelligence Analysis
Patrick F. Walsh, Charles Sturt University, Australia

This book tracks post 9/11 developments in national security and policing intelligence and their relevance to new emerging areas of intelligence practice such as: corrections, biosecurity, private industry and regulatory environments. Developments are explored thematically across three broad sections:

- understanding structures
- developing a discipline.

Issues explored include: understanding intelligence models, the strategic management challenges of intelligence, intelligence capacity building, and the ethical dimensions of intelligence practice. Using case studies collected from wide-ranging interviews with leaders, managers and intelligence practitioners from a range of practice areas in Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the UK and US, the book identifies examples of good practice across countries and agencies that may be relevant to other settings.

Uniquely bringing together significant theoretical and practical developments in a sample of traditional and emerging areas of intelligence, this book provides readers with a more holistic and inter-disciplinary perspective on the evolving intelligence field across several different practice contexts.

Intelligence and Intelligence Analysis will be relevant to a broad audience including intelligence practitioners and managers working across all fields of intelligence (national security, policing, private industry and emerging areas) as well as students taking courses in policing and intelligence analysis.

Police Custody
Governance, Legitimacy and Reform in the Criminal Justice Process
Layla Skinnis, University of Sheffield, UK

Police custody acts as an important gateway to the criminal justice process. Much is at stake here for both staff and suspects as what happens in police custody can have important consequences further down the line. This book offers a timely contribution to research on police custody, which has been largely neglected for the last decade, and it is the first to examine the growing role given to civilians employed by the police or by private security companies within police custody areas.

The book draws on a mixed-method study of two custody areas, one publicly-run, and the other largely privately-run. This empirical analysis explores anew suspects’ experiences of police custody from arrest to charge, including their access to due process rights such as phone calls, legal advice and detention reviews, as well as shedding light on the hitherto unexplored working relationships between the police, civilian police staff (public and private), legal advisers, doctors, appropriate adults and drug workers.

These findings on the police custody process are used to examine pertinent socio-legal and theoretical matters connected to due process, the role of the police in policing, as well as procedural justice and legitimacy. The book integrates issues which are topical and of utmost empirical, theoretical and political significance, meaning that it is likely to have a broad appeal to students, academics, practitioners and policy-makers with an interest in the criminal justice process, policing and the sociology of law.

Police Work
Principles and Practice
Colin Rogers, Rhobert Lewis, Tim John and Tim Read, all at University of Glamorgan, UK

This book provides a highly readable account of police work. It builds upon Introduction to Police Work (Rogers and Lewis 2007) to provide a comprehensive, in depth and critical understanding of policing in today’s diverse society.

Police Work: Principles and Practice meets the need for an increasingly sophisticated and professional approach to training within the police, whether this is carried out within police forces themselves or within higher education institutions. Written in an accessible style by current and former police practitioners and a nationally recognized expert on the National Intelligence Model, this book focuses – in line with the government’s agenda for workforce modernization – on three key areas of policing: community, investigation and intelligence. It introduces readers to many important areas through the use of definition boxes, scenario boxes highlighting good practice, points to note boxes, flowcharts and diagrams as well as a wide range of questions and exercises to help apply their knowledge to different situations and scenarios.

This book will be essential reading for those on probationer training programmes and a valuable resource for students taking courses in policing and criminology more generally where an advanced level of criminology is required.

Policing Twentieth Century Ireland
A History of An Garda S’ochána
Vicky Conway, Queen’s University, Belfast
Series: Routledge SOLON Explorations in Crime and Criminal Justice Histories

The twentieth century in Ireland saw colonial rule, the nationalist movement, the attainment of independence through a divisive treaty, civil war, poverty, the Northern Irish Conflict, and more recently the Celtic Tiger, the impact of globalization and secularization. Each of these changes brings substantive challenges for police forces. This book critically evaluates how the Irish police force, An Garda S’ochána, was influenced by and responded to the substantially changes which Ireland underwent.

Incorporating data from oral history interviews, analysis of policing literature, historical documents, government debates and newspapers this book assesses how the police force reacted to the intense social, political, cultural and economic changes.

The Policing of Terrorism
Organizational and Global Perspectives
Mathieu Deflem
Series: Criminology and Justice Studies

This book offers an analysis of the policing of terrorism in a variety of national and international contexts. Centered on developments since the events of September 11, 2001, the study devotes its empirical attention to important police aspects of counter-terrorism in the United States and additionally extends its range comparatively to other nations, including Israel and Iraq, and to the global level of international police organizations such as Interpol and Europol. Situated in the criminology of terrorism and counter-terrorism, this book offers a fascinating look into the contemporary organization of law enforcement against terrorism, which will significantly influence the conditions of global security in the foreseeable future.

Crime and Terrorism Risk
Studies in Criminology and Criminal Justice
Edited by Leslie W. Kennedy, Rutgers University, Newark, USA and Edmund F. McGarrell, Michigan State University, USA

Kenny and McGarrell's collection of essays explores largely uncharted terrain using the concept of risk assessment as their guiding light. The book will be especially valuable for terrorism and crime researchers and for students of criminal justice, homeland security, and risk assessment." - Gary LaFree, Criminology and Criminal Justice, University of Maryland, College Park

Crime and Terrorism Risk is a collection of original essays and articles that presents a broad overview of the issues related to the assessment and management of risk in the new security age. These original articles show how researchers, experts and the public are beginning to think about crime and terrorism issues in terms of a new risk paradigm that emphasizes establishing a balance between threat and resources in developing prevention and response strategies.

Criminal Major Case Management
Persons of Interest Priority Assessment Tool (POIPAT)
Larry Wilson, VicLAS, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Orleans, Canada

The Persons of Interest Priority Assessment Tool (POIPAT) is a new tool for investigations with numerous persons of interests and/or minimal investigatory resources. It provides an objective method to rank those suspects who are most likely to have committed the offense and dedicate their resources to those persons first. This method of targeting likely offenders has the potential to not only save a significant amount of investigative resources but more importantly, other potential victims. This book aims to assist readers in creating a POIPAT unique to their investigation. It includes a CD-ROM with a template that can be modified for any type of investigation and a number of additional tools and guides.

Ken Pease, University of Loughborough, UK
Series: Key Ideas in Criminology

This book seeks to enliven the topic of crime prevention by looking at pro-social behaviour alongside crime, to think of improving the quality of life by both deflecting people from the experience of crime – either as perpetrators, victims, or worried bystanders – and nudging them towards collaborative and altruistic behaviour; by changing things, places and people in ways which push people from crime and pull them towards active citizenship. Research and practice is reviewed taking this wider view of crime prevention.

Policing
Conceptualisations and Practices of Security
Michael Kempa, University of Ottawa, USA and Clifford D. Shearing, University of Cape Town, South Africa

Policing draws upon a review of recent literature and ongoing research pertaining to innovations in policing, particularly in North America, the United Kingdom, Southern Africa, South America and Australia. It explores conceptions, institutions and technologies for policing in the Anglo-American world since the early twentieth century. Policings is a social invention that is undergoing enormous changes and challenges. The authors trace these changes and the challenges that have prompted them, especially those that have taken place since the mid-twentieth century. They also address the theoretical and practical governance debates within a global context and will attract a readership beyond those with a particular interest in ‘policing’.

Online Child Sexual Abuse
Grooming, Policing and Child Protection in a Multi-Media World
Elena Martellozzo, Middlesex University, UK

This book addresses the complex, multi-faceted and, at times, counter-intuitive relationships between online grooming behaviours, risk assessment, police practices, and the actual danger of subsequent abuse in the physical world. Based on extensive ethnographic research conducted with the police and a specialist paedophile unit, here Elena Marellozzo presents an informed analysis of online child sexual abuse: of the patterns and characteristics of online grooming, and of the challenges and techniques that characterize its policing.

This book adds significantly to our understanding and knowledge of the problem of online child sexual abuse, the way in which victims are targeted and how this phenomenon is, and might be, policed.

Police Reform from the Bottom Up
Officers and their Unions as Agents of Change
Edited by Monique Marks, University of KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa and David Sklansky, University of California at Berkeley, USA

Series: Police Practice and Research

In this pioneering volume, an international, cross-disciplinary collection of scholars and police unionists address a range of neglected questions, both empirical and theoretical, about the place of police officers themselves in the process of reform – what it has been, and what it could be. They provide a fresh view of police reform as occurring from the bottom up rather than the top down. This book will be highly useful for practitioners and scholars who have a serious interest in the possibilities and limits of police organizational change.

This book is based on special issues of Police Practice and Research and Policing and Society.

FORTHCOMING IN 2012

Age of Imprisonment

Elaine M. Crawley, University of Salford, UK and Richard Sparks, University of Edinburgh, UK

This book addresses the issue of the rapidly growing number of elderly men entering and serving time in prison. It draws upon extensive original research in four prisons holding concentrations of men aged sixty-five plus years. It examines, in fine-grained detail, the emotional, psychological and practical implications of serving a prison sentence late in life and the challenges facing staff working with this prisoner group. The work reported in this book combines a contextual policy analysis and an appraisal of current regimes and practices with close observation in the field and narrative interviews.

This book will be of interest to academics and researchers working in the fields of criminology, prison studies and social studies of ageing, and those working in prisons in Britain and internationally.

Proportion: Working With Offenders

Rob Canton, De Montfort University, UK
Series: Criminal Justice Series

This book provides a comprehensive and accessible introduction to the work of the probation service. It brings together themes of policy, theory and practice to help students and practitioners to better understand the work of probation, its limitations as well as potential, but above all its value.

Setting probation in the context of the criminal justice system, the book explores its history, purposes and contemporary significance. It explains what probation is, discusses emerging ideas around offender management, and the value of an approach that centres on the idea of desistance. It considers the practice realities of working with offenders in the community. The book also covers the governance of probation and how policy and practice are responding to contemporary concerns about crime and community safety – for example through the management of risk. Although the main focus is on England and Wales, there is some discussion of other UK jurisdictions and of contemporary trends in European probation practices.

This book will encourage readers to appreciate the practical and theoretical strengths and shortcomings of contemporary probation practice. Information and discussion are presented clearly, with guidance about further study and pointers towards more specialized reading.

Probation: Working with Offenders will be essential reading for trainee probation officers and students of probation and offender management.

Selected Contents:
1. Probation and Criminal Justice
2. Probation’s Histories
3. Probation Values, Justice and Diversity

Criminal Law

Charles P. Nemeth, John Jay College of Criminal Justice, USA

Criminal Law, Second Edition blends legal and moral reasoning in the examination of crimes and explores the history relating to jurisprudence and roots of criminal law. It fosters discussions of controversial issues and delivers abridged case law decisions that target the essence of appellate rulings. Grounded in the model penal code, making the text national in scope, this volume examines:

- why the criminal codes originated, and the moral, religious, spiritual, and human influences that led to our present system
- how crimes are described in the modern criminal justice model
- the two essential elements necessary for criminal culpability: actus reus (the act committed or omitted) and mens rea (the mind and intent of the actor)
- offenses against the body resulting in death, including murder, manslaughter, felony murder, and negligent homicide
- nonterminal criminal conduct against the body, including robbery, kidnapping, false imprisonment, assault, and hate crimes
- sexual assault, rape, necrophilia, incest, and child molestation
- property offenses, such as larceny/ theft, bribery, forgery, and embezzlement
- crimes against the home, including burglary, trespass, arson, and vandalism.

The book also examines controversial public morality issues such as prostitution, drug legalization, obscenity, and pornography. The final two chapters discuss inchoate offenses, where the criminal act has not been completed, and various criminal defenses such as legal insanity, entrapment, coercion, self-defense, and mistake of fact or law.

Important keywords introduce each chapter, and discussion questions and suggested readings appear at the end of each chapter, prompting lively debate and further inquiry into a fascinating subject area that continues to evolve.

The New Criminal Justice

American Communities and the Changing World of Crime Control

Edited by John Klofas, Rochester Institute of Technology, USA, Natalie Kroovand Hippel and Edmund L.F. McGarrell, both at Michigan State University, USA

Series: Criminology and Justice Studies

Criminal Justice in the United States is in the midst of momentous changes: an era of low crime rates not seen since the 1960s, and a variety of budget crunches also exerting profound impacts on the system. This is the first book available to chronicle these changes and suggest a new, emerging model of the criminal justice system.

Criminal Justice Theory

An Introduction

Roger Hopkins-Burke, Nottingham Trent University, UK

Criminal Justice Theory examines the theoretical foundations of criminal justice in the modern era, whilst also considering legal philosophy and ethics, explaining criminal behaviour, and discussing policing, the court process, and penology in the context of contemporary socio-economic debates. Throughout the book, a realist theoretical thread acts as a guide interlinking concepts of social progress, conflict, and cerebral models of criminal justice, whilst also recognizing our collision in the creation of an increasingly pervasive culture of socio-control which now characterizes contemporary society.

The complex theoretical issues tackled in this book are addressed in an accessible style, making this a relevant and comprehensive introduction to criminal justice theory for students on a wide range of undergraduate criminal justice modules. It is also a helpful guide for those commencing postgraduate studies in the disciplines of criminal justice, criminology, and law.

Lifers

Seeking Redemption in Prison

John Irwin

John Irwin writes about prisons from an unusual academic perspective. Before receiving a Ph.D. in sociology, he served five years in a California state penitentiary for armed robbery. This is his sixth book on imprisonment – an ethnography of prisoners who have served more than twenty years in a California correctional institution. The purpose of the book is to take issue with the conventional wisdom on homicide, society's purposes of imprisonment, and offenders' reformationality. Through the lifers' stories, he reveals what happens to prisoners serving very long sentences in correctional facilities and what this should tell us about effective sentencing policy.

Corrections

Foundations for the Future

Jeanne B. Stinchcomb, Florida Atlantic University, USA

Series: Criminology and Justice Studies

Jeanne Stinchcomb's book makes an excellent contribution to the field of corrections serving as a substantial resource for those teaching corrections and as a practical inspiration for those students who will ultimately lead the profession.” – Faith E. Lutze, Ph.D., Washington State University

Written by a master teacher with over a decade of experience in federal, state, and local justice agencies, this is the most comprehensive, yet affordable, corrections text on the market. Students will like everything about it – from the reasonable cost to the user-friendly narrative that keeps them engaged. Chapters are written with the passion of a former correctional trainer and administrator, while balancing both sides of every issue. Based on proven concepts of instructional design, the narrative features:

- measurable learning outcomes that are placed strategically throughout the chapters
- material is presented in a ‘building-block’ method designed to enhance learning
- ‘Close-up on Corrections’ boxes reinforce content with real-life stories and examples.

Realistic insights are provided into virtually every aspect of the ‘correctional conglomerate’ – from the impact of sentencing policies to the effects of institutional life and the difficulties of re-entry. Unlike most other texts, an entire chapter is devoted to the correctional workforce – which gives students insights into the challenges as well as rewards of such employment. Best of all for the instructor, the book’s flexibility and supplemental material make it a breeze to use in the classroom. Electronic versions are available for online and hybrid courses, and it is customizable in inexpensive paperback form. The instructor’s manual, written entirely by the Author of the text itself, includes over 500 high-quality test questions directly correlated with each learning outcome featured in the text, along with annotated websites, teaching tips, and powerpoint slides.

When Crime Appears
The Role of Emergence
Edited by Jean Marie McGloin, University of Maryland, College Park, USA, Christopher J. Sullivan, University of Cincinnati, USA and Leslie W. Kennedy, Rutgers University, USA
Series: Criminology and Justice Studies
This book brings together work from a unique conceptual perspective that helps to better understand the complex relationships that give rise to crime.

When Crime Appears: The Role of Emergence is concerned with our ability to make sense of the complex underpinnings of the end-stage patterns and events that we see in studying crime. The book offers an early narrative on the concept of emergence as it pertains to criminological research. Collectively, the chapters in this volume provide a sense of why the emergence framework could be useful, outlines its core conceptual properties, provides some examples of its potential application, and presents some discussion of methodological and analytic issues related to its adoption.

Rethinking Policing and Justice
Exploring Alternatives to Law Enforcement
Edited by Luis Fernandez, Northern Arizona University, USA and Laura Huey, University of Western Ontario, Canada
Rethinking Policing and Justice critically examines the role of policing (both state and non-state forms) in the provision of justice (and injustice). It also shows a variety of theoretical, methodology, and other approaches for the critical evaluation of law enforcement, highlighting different insights into alternative modes of policing, as we seek to understand and redraft the relationship between policing and justice. This book was originally published as a special issue of Contemporary Justice Review.

CULTURAL CRIMINOLOGY

Crime, Policy and the Media
The Shaping of Criminal Justice, 1989-2010
Jon Silverman, University of Bedfordshire, UK

"Silverman challenges us to maintain the checks and balances of a civilized society, the debate that underpins it and, in spite of the inevitable noises from the media which challenge the establishment, to respond with thoughtfulness and balance." — David Blunkett, MP

Media clouram on issues relating to crime, justice and civil liberties has never been more insistent. Whether it is the murder of James Bulger or the trial of the MP who closed her eyes, public debate is an ever-present feature of our media landscape. Yet criminology has paid little attention to the changing nature of media and politics. This book, written by a leading media studies expert and former Home Affairs Correspondent, challenges the conventional wisdom of media criminology and asks us to re-consider the relationship between the media and policy-making. Through in-depth analysis of the media's role in shaping the agenda and policy in crime and justice, the book offers a vivid account of how media power has become an influential force in shaping the way crime is perceived and managed. It will be of interest to students and scholars in criminology, cultural studies and policy studies as well as those working in media studies and journalism.

Serial Killers
Psychiatry, Criminology, Responsibility
Francesca Biagi-Chai
Translated by Veronique Voruz, University of Leicester, UK and Phillip Dravers, University of Pittsburgh, USA

Francesca Biagi-Chai’s book — a translation from the French of Les Cas Landru — tackles the issue of criminal responsibility in the case of serial killers, and other ‘mad’ people who are nonetheless deemed to be answerable before the law in most jurisdictions. The author, a Lacanian psychoanalyst and senior psychiatrist in France, with extensive experience working in institutional settings, analyzes the logic informing the crimes of famous serial killers.

Life as a Weapon
The Global Rise of Suicide Bombings
Riaz Hassan, Flinders University, Australia

Suicide bombing has become a weapon of choice among terrorist groups because of its lethality and ability to cause mayhem and fear. But who carries out these acts, and what motivates them? By undertaking analysis of the information in the most comprehensive suicide terrorism database in the world, Life as a Weapon seeks to question and in turn undermine the common perception that the psychopathology of suicide bombers and their religious beliefs are the principal causes.

State Crime

Alan Doig

Series: Crime and Society Series

This book provides an introduction to state crime, with a particular focus on the UK, where the use of crime to achieve policy and political objectives is an underdeveloped aspect of academic study. The book overviews the various definitional issues, before exploring possible examples of state crime in the UK, and considering why state crime occurs and how it is investigated and adjudicated.

Torturing Terrorists

Exploring the Limits of Law, Human Rights and Academic Inquiry

Philip Rumney, University of the West of England, UK

This book considers the theoretical, policy and empirical arguments relevant to the debate concerning the legalisation of interrogational torture. Torturing Terrorists examines, as part of a conceptualist analysis, the nature and impact of torture and the implications of its legal regulation on individuals, institutions and wider society. In so doing, the book engages in a wide ranging inter-disciplinary analysis of the arguments and claims that are put forward by the proponents and opponents of legalized torture.

The text critically evaluates suggestions that debating the legalization of torture is ‘dangerous’ and should be avoided. Further, it examines the argument that the ticking bomb hypothesis is a myth and considers the effectiveness of torture in producing what will be described as ‘ticking bomb’ and ‘infrastructure’ intelligence. It also includes an analysis of the use of interrogational torture and coercion by state officials in the United Kingdom. Finally, the book includes the text of a torture statute which will be used to illustrate the difficulties in controlling the use of interrogational torture and the problems such a law could create for judges, law enforcement and wider society.

Transnational Environmental Crime

Toward an Eco-global Criminology

Rob White, University of Tasmania, Australia

This book provides a comprehensive introduction to and overview of eco-global criminology. Eco-global criminology refers to a criminological approach that is informed by ecological considerations and by a critical analysis that is global in scale and perspective. Based upon eco-justice conceptions of harm, it focuses on transgressions against environments, non-human species and humans.

At the centre of eco-global criminology is analysis of transnational environmental crime. This includes crimes related to pollution (of air, water and land) and crimes against wildlife (including illegal trade in ivory as well as live animals). It also includes those harms that pose threats to the environment more generally (such as global warming). In addressing these issues, the book deals with topics such as the conceptualization of environmental crime or harm, the researching of transnational environmental harm, climate change and social conflict, threats to biodiversity, toxic waste and the transference of harm, prosecution and sentencing of environmental crimes, and environmental victimization and transnational activism.

This book argues that analysis of transnational environmental crime needs to incorporate different notions of harm, and that the overarching perspective of eco-global criminology provides the framework for this.

Transnational Environmental Crime will be an essential resource for students, academics, policy-makers, environmental managers, police, magistrates and others with a general interest in environmental issues.

Organized Child Sexual Abuse

Michael Salter, University of Western Sydney, Australia

Examining the existing evidence, and supplementing it with further qualitative research, in this book Michael Salter addresses: the relationship between sexual abuse and organized abuse; questions over the veracity of testimony; the gap between the policing response to sexual abuse and the realities of child sexual exploitation; the contexts in which sexually abusive groups develop and operate; the role of religion and ritual in subcultures of multi-perpetrator sexual abuse; as well as the experiences of adult and children with histories of organized abuse in the criminal justice system and health system. Organized Child Sexual Abuse thus provides a definitive analysis that will be of immense value to those with professional and academic interests in this area.

2nd Edition

Endangered Children

Homicide and Other Crimes

Lita Linzer Schwartz and Natalie K. Isser, both at Pennsylvania State University, USA

Endangered Children: Homicide, and Other Crimes, Second Edition focuses on the myriad threats facing children and provides insight into possible solutions. Beginning with a history of child abuse, the book explores this phenomenon as presented in literature and in other cultural references. It then provides sociobiological and cross-cultural perspectives on neonatice. It examines motives for abuse and explores how shame and denial of pregnancy can lead to the killing of an infant from moments of its birth.

The book examines legal ramifications to neonatice in the U.S. and abroad, including psychological and psychiatric defenses. Additional chapters focus on shaken baby syndrome and Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy, and the book includes a new chapter on postpartum depression. The 2nd Edition include profiles of several notorious cases, including Susan Smith and Andrea Yates. They also discuss issues related to abortion and euthanasia, and conclude by suggesting preventive measures to child abuse and therapeutic rehabilitation.

Exploring a social tragedy from a psychological, sociological, and criminological perspectives, the authors attempt to answer the many questions that arise from these crimes against our most vulnerable, offering readers a thought-provoking resource that is sure to encourage further research and inquiry.

Sex Trafficking

A Private Law Response

Tsachi Keren-Paz, University of Keele, UK

Sex Trafficking: A Private Law Approach examines existing and potential causes of action against sex traffickers, in order to outline the argument for fair and effective private law remedies. Combining a theoretical inquiry about the borders of liability in torts and restitution with a political commitment to protecting the interests of victims of sex trafficking, this book offers a comparative doctrinal and socio-legal analysis of the effectiveness of private law remedies. Tsachi Keren-Paz innovatively and convincingly makes the argument that all those directly involved in violating the rights of victims of sex trafficking should compensate them for their losses, and make restitution of the profits made at their expense. Sex Trafficking will be invaluable to both academics and practitioners concerned with prostitution, modern slavery and trafficking, as well as those with interests in private law theory and practice.

Human Trafficking

Interdisciplinary Perspectives

Edited by Mary C. Burke, Carlow University, USA

Series: Criminology and Justice Studies

Today, there are more people held as slaves than at any other point in history. The problem has received some sensational television coverage and law enforcement agencies are paying increased attention to the issue. However, this is not enough. It is necessary to increase the extent to which issues related to human trafficking are understood and addressed and for those with experience in the anti-slavery movement of this century, to make their expertise available to others. This text will do just that with its wide range of chapter authors from a variety of academic disciplines and professions, all of whom have extensive knowledge and ideas about this important issue. This text also stands out as written specifically for undergraduate and graduate student teaching.

Selected Contents:
Section 1: Human Trafficking Explained
Section 2: A Closer Look
Section 4: Training/Special Topics in Human Trafficking 14. Training Considerations for Law Enforcement (Holtz and/or Bornyak) 15. Training Considerations for Health Care and Social Service Personnel 16. Solving the Problem:Getting Involved

Many changes have occurred in the twenty-five years that have passed since the enactment of the Money Laundering Control Act of 1986. The law has been amended, new underlying crimes have been added, and court decisions have modified its scope. The Act remains an important tool in combating criminal activity. Now in its third edition, Money Laundering: A Guide for Criminal Investigators covers the basics of finding ill-gotten gains, linking them to the criminal, and seizing them. Providing a clear understanding of money laundering practices, it explains the investigative and legislative processes that are essential in detecting and circumventing this illegal and dangerous activity.

Highlights of the third edition include:

- The rise of money laundering in contexts of major crime and terrorism
- Law and policy shifts related to terrorism and financing
- New trends in crime and terrorism financing
- Important court decisions and changes in federal law
- The Commodification of Illicit Flows
- Minimum Wage – An Ally in the Fight Against Human Trafficking

International Perspectives on Child Victimisation
Julia Davidson, Kingston University, UK and Christopher Hamerton, University of Westminster, UK

This book offers an evaluation of responses to the transnational crime of human trafficking and governance of the issue through a case study of the Greater Mekong Subregion (GMS) which comprises Cambodia, the People’s Republic of China, Lao People’s Democratic Republic, Myanmar, Thailand, and Viet Nam. It analyzes the international and national legal and policy frameworks and the role of governments, international and national non-governmental institutions, and regional processes, in responding to trafficking issues in the GMS.

The advantages and limits of the new international framework for tackling human trafficking are explored from the perspective of the region’s experience with international and national multi-lateral programmes, illustrating how the new international framework for tackling human trafficking has translated into practice. The book considers issues about competing mandates, and gaps in strategies for protection and concludes with a discussion of broader lessons to be learned from the GMS situation and suggestions for future governance strategies in the fight against trafficking.

Doing Justice to Young People
Youth Crime and Social Justice
Roger Smith, De Montfort University, UK

There is an apparent impasse in current thinking about youth crime and justice which is represented by punitive and harmful practices on one hand, and critical objections to these processes on the other. This book, whilst clearly located within the critical perspective, attempts to move beyond this blockage, and to arrive at an alternative strategy for resolving the tensions between young people, especially those on and beyond the margins, and the social world which frames their lives.

Evidence Based Policy and Practice in Youth Justice

Edited by Anna Stewart, Troy Allard and Susan Dennison, all at Griffith University, Australia

Evidence Based Policy and Practice in Youth Justice is a significant collection that critiques the existing evidence base about the causes and prevention of youth offending in Australia and promotes the further development of this evidence base. It draws on Australian evidence wherever possible, highlighting international evidence where Australian evidence is not available or is conflicting. The book is organized according to three broad themes that:
• provides up-to-date knowledge about the system and major approaches for understanding youth offending
• explores the usefulness of alternative approaches to prevent offending
• identifies the techniques necessary to establish an evidence base to influence decisions and promote change.

There is no quick fix to youth offending. Policy makers and practitioners need to critically examine the available evidence and select responses that are most likely to be effective for reducing offending, recognizing the multiple contexts in which young people experience risk.

This work provides the necessary information and promotes further development of the evidence base so that youth justice systems can better meet the needs of young Australians.

Youth in Crisis?
‘Gangs’, Territoriality and Violence
Edited by Barry Goldson, University of Liverpool, UK

‘Goldson’s collection is the first in the UK to systematically and critically expose the ‘crisis discourses’, amnesia and minimal knowledge that routinely surround the burgeoning ‘gang control industry.’ Anyone seriously interested in becoming better informed about the relations between young people and violence should read this book first.’

– Professor John Muncie, The Open University

Few issues attract greater concern and censure than those that surround youth ‘gangs’. Paradoxically, youth researchers have conventionally been reluctant to even use the term ‘gang’ but, more recently, such reluctance has receded. Indeed, it is increasingly claimed that – in particular urban ‘territories’ – youth gangs are commonplace, some young people are deeply immersed in violence and the carrying and use of weapons (particularly knives and firearms) is routine.

Comprising a series of essays from leading national and international researchers, this book subjects such claims to rigorous critical scrutiny. It provides a challenging and authoritative account of complex questions pertaining to urban youth identities, crime and social order. This book:
• locates the question of ‘gangs’ in both historical and contemporary contexts
• engages a spectrum of theoretical perspectives and analytical positions
• presents and analyzes cutting-edge empirical research
• addresses a range of previously neglected questions, including those pertaining to girls, young women and ‘gangs’.

Delinquency Theories
Appraisals and applications
John P. Hoffmann, Brigham Young University, USA

Delinquency Theories: Appraisals and applications provides a fulsome and accessible overview of contemporary theories of juvenile delinquency. The book opens with a comprehensive description of what a theory is, and explains how theories are created in the social sciences. Following on, each subsequent chapter is dedicated to describing an individual theory, broken down and illustrated within four distinct sections. Initially, each chapter tells the tale of a delinquent youth, and from this example a thorough review of the particular theory and related research can be undertaken to explain the youth’s delinquent behaviour. The third and fourth sections of each chapter critically analyze the theories, and provide a straightforward discussion of policy implications of each, thus encouraging readers to evaluate the usefulness of these theories and also to consider the relationship between theory and policy.

This text is an invaluable resource for both undergraduate and graduate students of subjects such as youth justice, delinquency, social theory, and criminology.

Sex, Drugs, and Death
Addressing Youth Problems in American Society
Tammy L. Anderson, University of Delaware, USA

Sex, Drugs, and Death: Addressing Youth Problems in American Society explores how youth lifestyles, identity pursuits, behaviors and activities produce a wide range of social problems in contemporary society. The book focuses on the interconnections between three of the most significant youth issues: sexuality, substance use and suicide. The book pays special attention to the unique pursuits of young people and the locations in which they interact, including virtual places like Facebook and more actual ones such as high school, college, and nightclubs. Patterns among females and males of various class, race, and ethnic backgrounds are also featured prominently in the text as well as how sociologists think about and study them.

Biosocial Criminology

New Directions in Theory and Research

Edited by Anthony Walsh and Kevin M. Beaver

Series: Criminology and Justice Studies

This book is designed to bring criminology into the twenty-first century by showing how leading criminologists have integrated aspects of the biological sciences into their discipline. These authors cover behavior and molecular genetics, epigenetics, evolutionary biology, and neuroscience, and apply them to various correlates of crime such as age, race, and gender. There are also chapters on substance abuse, psychopathy, career criminals, testosterone and treatment. While not trashing traditional ideas about these topics, the authors of these chapters show how biosocial concepts add to, complement, and strengthen those ideas. The book is uniquely valuable in that it brings together many of the leading figures in biosocial criminology to illustrate how the major issues and concerns of criminologists cannot be adequately addressed without understanding their genetic, hormonal, neurological, and evolutionary bases.

Research in Practice for Forensic Professionals

NEW
Edited by Kerry Sheldon, Peaks Academic and Research Unit, Rampton Hospital, UK, Jason Davies, ABM University Health Board, UK and Kevin Howells, University of Nottingham, UK

There is no single way to do good research. The Editors of this text have taken a broad perspective, and contributions cover a wide range of research issues and specific methods applicable in forensic work. Chapters are authored by leading researchers, who explain their work clearly, without sacrificing detail. This book will certainly be of use to students who are developing their research skills. I would also strongly recommend it to qualified practitioners who wish to gather information about their service users, evaluate their interventions, or better understand the systems in which they work with offenders. Whether your job is to catch and convict offenders, or to work with them to reduce risk, in this book you will find a way to answer some of the important questions you have no doubt asked in the past. – Professor Mary McMurran, Institute of Mental Health, University of Nottingham
This book explores the use of applied research methods used in forensic settings and provides a ‘how-to’ book for forensic practitioners and researchers. Editors have backgrounds as both practitioners and researchers.

All too often, the weakest link in the chain of criminal justice is the crime scene investigation. Improper collection of evidence blocks the finding of truth. Now, in its second edition, Practical Crime Scene Processing and Investigation presents practical, proven methods to be used at any crime scene to ensure that evidence is admissible and persuasive.

Accompanied by more than 300 color photographs, topics discussed include:

- understanding the nature of physical evidence, including fingerprint, biological, trace, hair and fiber, and other forms of evidence
- actions of the responding officer, from documenting and securing the initial information to providing emergency care
- assessing the scene, including search considerations and dealing with chemical and bioterror hazards
- crime scene photography, sketching, mapping, and notes and reports
- light technology and preserving fingerprint and impression evidence
- shooting scene documentation and reconstruction
- bloodstain pattern analysis and the body as a crime scene
- special scene considerations, including fire, buried bodies, and entomological evidence
- the role of crime scene analysis and reconstruction, with step-by-step procedures.

Two appendices provide additional information on crime scene equipment and risk management, and each chapter is enhanced by a succinct summary, suggested scene equipment and risk management, and each chapter is enhanced by a succinct summary, suggested
