Fifty Key Thinkers on the Holocaust and Genocide

Paul R. Bartrop, Deakin University, Australia and Steven L. Jacobs, University of Alabama, USA

Series: Routledge Key Guides

This unique volume critically discusses the works of fifty of the most influential scholars involved in the study of the Holocaust and genocide. Studying each scholar’s background and influences, the authors examine the ways in which their major works have been received by critics and supporters, and analyse each thinker’s contributions to the field. Key figures discussed range from historians and philosophers, to theologians, anthropologists, art historians and sociologists.

Child Hunger and Human Rights
International Governance
Clair Apodaca, Florida International University, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Human Rights
Child Hunger and Human Rights: International Governance applies the human rights theory of legal obligation to the problem of child malnutrition and investigates whether duty-bearers have fulfilled their obligations to protect, respect and provide. This book includes moral, economic, political and legal components to the research on the child’s right to be free from hunger. Using two methods of investigation, the first a historical comparative method based on the systematic analysis of the content of historical materials, government documents, policy statements, state budgets, newspaper reports and other public records, and the second is statistical analysis. Apodaca investigates beyond the suffering, deformities, and deaths of children, to child malnutrition resulting in reduced physical and mental development threatening the child’s life opportunities, the prospects of further generations, and the growth of the economy.

Theories of Violent Conflict

An Introduction
Jolle Demmers, Utrecht University, the Netherlands

In reviewing theories of conflict, this book takes the centrality of the group as actor in contemporary conflict as a point of departure. In the post-Cold War shift from inter-state to intra-state conflict, the key role of the group – ethnic, religious, cultural and other – is more widely acknowledged: of the 118 conflicts that have taken place between 1989 and 2004, only 7 have been inter-state wars. This implies that any meaningful analysis of contemporary conflict should involve the study of (identity) group formation, dynamics of interaction and collective action.

We are left with three main questions from this departure point:

- What makes a group?
- Why and how does a group resort to violence?
- Why and how do or don’t they stop?

This book aims to examine and compare the ways by which these questions are addressed from a number of prominent research perspectives: constructivism, social identity theory, structuralism, political economy, human needs theory, relative deprivation theory, collective action theory, and rational choice theory. The final chapter of the book aims to synthesize structure and agency-based theories by proposing a structurationist approach to violent conflict.

Humanitarianism and Humanitarian Intervention

NEW

Humanitarianism Contested
Where Angels Fear to Tread
Michael Barnett, George Washington University, USA and Thomas G. Weiss, City University of New York, USA
This book provides a succinct but sophisticated understanding of humanitarianism and insight into the on-going dilemmas and tensions that have accompanied it since its origins in the early nineteenth century. Combining theoretical and historical exposition with a broad range of contemporary case studies, the book:
• provides a brief survey of the history of humanitarianism
• explains the evolution of humanitarianism
• presents an overview of the contemporary humanitarian sector
• analyses the ethical dilemmas confronted by humanitarian organization, not only in the abstract but also, and most importantly, in real situations and when lives are at stake
• examines how humanitarianism poses fundamental ethical questions regarding the kind of world we want to live in, what kind of world is possible, and how we might get there.

Globalisation and Migration
New Issues, New Politics
Edited by Ronalda Munck, Dublin City University, Ireland
Series: Third Worlds

This book critically examines the new issues and new politics regarding migration in the era of globalisation from a majority world perspective. It examines the current shifts in the global political economy and the effects it has, for example, in relation to rural displacement. When and how does this lead to national and/or transnational migration? We need to examine the ways in which migration is cut across and impacts on the generation of racism and xenophobia in the west. The issue of remittances by migrants to the ‘developing’ nations needs careful study as does the controversial issue of ‘brain drain’ versus ‘brain gain’ through migration. The growing importance of trafficking for forced labour has now been taken up by various international bodies but is it the new normality or simply an unfortunate side effect of globalisation to be overcome through legislation? Migration is becoming increasingly gendered in its composition and flows but also in the receiving countries where men and women do very different jobs. We can predict the effect of globalisation to be overcome through the new normality or simply an unfortunate side effect of globalisation to be overcome through legislation?

International Statebuilding

NEW

International Statebuilding
The Rise of Post-Liberal Governance
David Chandler, University of Westminster, UK
Series: Critical Issues in Global Politics
This concise and accessible new text offers original and insightful analysis of the policy paradigm informing international statebuilding interventions. The book covers the theoretical frameworks and practices of international statebuilding, the debates they have triggered, and the way that international statebuilding has developed in the post-Cold War era. Spanning a broad remit of policy practices from post-conflict peacebuilding to sustainable development and EU enlargement, Chandler draws out how these policies have been cohered around the problematization of autonomy or self-government. Rather than promoting democracy on the basis of the universal capacity of people for self-rule, international statebuilding assumes that people lack capacity to make their own judgments safely and therefore that democracy requires external intervention and the building of civil society and state institutional capacity. Chandler argues that this policy framework inversed traditional liberal–democratic understandings of autonomy and freedom – privileging governance over government – and that the dominance of this policy perspective is a cause of concern for those who live in states involved in statebuilding as much as for those who are subject to these new regulatory frameworks.

Security, Development and the Fragile State
Bridging the Gap between Theory and Policy
David Carment, Carleton University, Canada, Stewart Prest, University of British Columbia, Canada and Yiagodeesen Samy, Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada
This book reconceptualises the notions of state failure and fragility, to provide a new policy-relevant framework on these issues. In a wide-ranging treatment, drawing on large samples and case studies, the authors create an alternative model of the fragile state emphasizing the multidimensional, multifaceted nature of the ‘fragile state problematic’.

Security and Governance

Series Edited by Fiona B. Adamson, School of Oriental and African Studies, UK, Roland Paris, University of Ottawa, Canada and Stefan Wolff, University of Birmingham, UK

This series publishes high quality original research that reflects broadening conceptions of security and the growing nexus between the study of governance issues and security issues. Scholarship published in the series will meet the highest academic standards, and will be both theoretically innovative and policy-relevant. Work appearing in the series will be at the cutting edge of debates taking place at the intersection of security studies and governance studies.

Truth Commissions and Transitional Societies

The Impact on Human Rights and Democracy
Eric Wiebelhaus-Brahm, University of Colorado, USA

“This ground-breaking study of truth commissions is essential reading for anyone interested in taking stock of one of the most common measures of transitional justice. Its mixture of qualitative case studies and quantitative analysis offers new rigor to the assessment of truth commissions. His findings, that truth commissions have negative effects on human rights in the near term, and negligible impact on democratization, should be carefully considered by practitioners and scholars of transitional justice.” – Chandra Lekha Sriram, University of East London, UK

This book uses a multi-method approach to examine the impact of truth commissions on subsequent human rights protection and democratic practice and features cross-national case studies on South Africa, El Salvador, Chile and Uganda.

The International Politics of Mass Atrocities
The Case of Darfur
Edited by David R. Black, Dalhousie University, Canada and Paul D. Williams, George Washington University, USA

‘This collection of essays provide an elegant reminder of why international society is a contested concept and Darfur is a contested conflict. A first-rate piece of work about the central dilemmas facing governments, international organizations, NGOs, and citizens.’ – Thomas G. Weiss, The CUNY Graduate Center, USA

This book examines the Darfur crisis to address wider debates within IR theory including: the ‘responsibility to prevent’, humanitarian intervention, sovereignty, peacekeeping, relationships between the world’s great powers, and international mediation.

Human Security in Southeast Asia
Yukiko Nishikawa, Mahidol University, Thailand

Series: Routledge Security in Asia Pacific

There is a growing interest in human security in Southeast Asia. This book firstly explores the theoretical and conceptual basis of human security, before focusing on the region itself. It shows how human security has been taken up as a central part of security policy in individual states in Southeast Asia, as well as in the regional security policy within the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

Security Studies
A Reader
Edited by Christopher W. Hughes and Yew Meng Lai, both at University of Warwick, UK

This reader brings together key contributions from many of the leading scholars in the field, offering students an informed overview of the most significant work in security studies. The editors chart the development of the key theoretical and empirical debates in security studies in the Cold War and post-Cold War periods, introducing the ideas of the most influential ‘past masters’ and contemporary thinkers on security in the UK, US and elsewhere.

In order to guide students through the issues, the book has a substantial critical introduction exploring the development of security studies, as well as introductory essays that provide an overview of each section, highlighting clearly how the readings fit together. Suggestions for further reading and key questions for discussion are also included.

Security Studies is an invaluable resource for all students of security studies and international relations.

Defining and Defying Organised Crime
Discourse, Perceptions and Reality
Edited by Felia Allum, University of Bath, UK, Francesca Longo, Università degli Studi di Catania, Italy, Daniela Irrera, Università degli Studi di Catania, Italy and Panos A. Kostakos, University of Bath, UK

Organised crime is now a major threat to all industrial and non-industrial countries. Using an inter-disciplinary and comparative approach this book examines the existing, official institutional discourse on organised crime to examine whether, or not, it has an impact on perceptions of the threat and on the reality of organized crime.

Peace Operations and Organised Crime
Enemies or Allies?
Edited by James Cockayne and Adam Lupel, both at International Peace Institute, New York, USA

Series: Cass Series on Peacekeeping

Peace operations are increasingly on the front line in the international community’s fight against organized crime, in venues such as Afghanistan, the Balkans, Haiti, Iraq, and West Africa. The threat posed by organized crime to international and human security has become a matter of considerable strategic concern for national and international decision-makers in recent years, but the literature is fragmented and reactive, with only isolated attempts to provide systematic thinking. This book addresses that gap in the literature – and questions the emerging orthodoxy that portrays organized crime as an external threat to the liberal peace offered by the international community, delivered through peace operations.

Governing Ethnic Conflict
Conscription, Identity and the Price of Peace
Andrew Finlay, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland
Series: Routledge Studies in Peace and Conflict Resolution
This book offers an intellectual history of an emerging technology of peace and explains how the liberal state has come to endorse illiberal subjects and practices. Drawing on an analysis of the peace process in Ireland and the Dayton Accords in Bosnia Herzegovina, the book argues that the problem with consociational arrangements is not simply that they institutionalise ethnic division and privilege particular identities or groups, but, more importantly, that they close down the space for other ways of being. By specifying identity categories, consociational regimes create a residual, sink category, designated ‘other’. These ‘others’ not only offer a challenge to prevailing ideas about identity but also stand in reproof to the liberal wisdom regarding the management of conflict.
This book will be of much interest to students of conflict resolution, ethnic conflict, identity, and war and conflict studies in general.

Routledge Handbook of Ethnic Conflict
Edited by Karl Cordell, University of Plymouth, UK and Stefan Wolff, University of Birmingham, UK
The contributors to this volume offer a 360-degree perspective on ethnic conflict: from the theoretical foundations of nationalism and ethnicity, to the causes and consequences of ethnic conflict, and to the various strategies adopted in response to it. Without privileging any specific explanation of why ethnic conflict happens at a specific place and time or why attempts at preventing or settling it might fail or succeed, the Routledge Handbook of Ethnic Conflict enables readers to gain better insights into such defining moments in post-Cold War international history as the disintegrations of the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia and their respective consequences and the genocide in Rwanda, as well as the relative success of conflict settlement efforts in Northern Ireland, Macedonia, and Aceh.

Conflict, Security and Development
An Introduction
Paul Jackson and Danielle Beswick, both at University of Birmingham, UK
This new textbook addresses the impact of conflict and security on development initiatives. Currently, there is no available textbook that marries academic teaching and approaches with practical policy experience in the way this one does. The authors integrate these elements through three key features:
• uses the best of recent academic theory, field research and policy to provide an overview of the connections between security and development
• explores the implications of these connections for the theory and practice of development
• investigates the challenges that arise for post-conflict reconstruction when we recognise that security and development are mutually contingent.

War, Feminism & International Relations
Edited by Christine Sylvester, University of Lancaster, UK
This book is a major new contribution to our understanding of war and international relations (IR). Divided into two sections, the first part surveys the state of war and war studies in international relations, security studies and in feminist international relations. The second part addresses a missing area of IR studies of war that feminism is well-placed to fill in: the emotional and physical aspects of war.
Drawing on the latest feminist thinking, the 'war on terror'.

Gender &
Human Rights
Global Politics

A New Introduction

Edited by Jenny Edkins, University of Wales, Aberystwyth, UK and Maja Zehfuss, University of Manchester, UK

"One of the freshest, most engaging texts on international politics I've read in ages! Jenny Edkins and Maja Zehfuss have done the almost impossible - created a text that is globally aware, conceptually rich AND positively engaging. I can imagine students (and their professors) plunging into these enticing questions, making surprising connections between the cases, testing and refining proposed answers and coming up with fresh insights of their own." – Cynthia Enloe, Clark University, USA, and author of Globalization and Militarism

Political Evil in a Global Age
Hannah Arendt and International Theory
Patrick Hayden, University of St. Andrews, UK
Series: Routledge Innovations in Political Theory

Perpetrators, Accomplices and Victims in Twentieth-Century Politics
Reckoning with the Past
Edited by Anatoly M. Khazanov and Stanley Payne, both at University of Wisconsin, USA
Series: Totalitarianism Movements and Political Religions
These studies examine the ways in which succeeding democratic regimes have dealt with, or have ignored (and in several cases sugar-coated) an authoritarian or totalitarian past from 1943 to the present. They treat the relationship with democratization and the different ways in which collective memory is formed and dealt with, or ignored and suppressed.

Surviving Field Research
Working in Violent and Difficult Situations
Edited by John C. King and Julie A. Mertus, both at American University, Washington DC, USA, and Chandra Lekha Sriram, Olga Martin-Ortega and Johanna Herman, all at University of East London, UK

The International Journal of Human Rights
Editor: Frank Barnaby, Stockbridge, Hants, UK
Associate Editors: Jason Ralph and Gabrielle Lynch, both at University of Leeds, UK, Sonja Grover, Lakehead University, Ontario, Canada
Volume 15, 7 issues per year
Print ISSN: 1364-2987, Online ISSN: 1744-053X
The International Journal of Human Rights covers an exceptionally broad spectrum of human rights issues: human rights and the law, race, religion, gender, children, class, refugees and immigration. In addition to these general areas, the journal publishes articles and reports on the human rights aspects of genocide, torture, capital punishment and the laws of war and war crimes. To encourage debate, the editors publish Forum pieces and discussion papers from authoritative writers in the field. They also welcome comments, reflections, thematic essays and review articles and critical surveys of the literature.

Journal of Genocide Research
Senior Editor: Jürgen Zimmerer, University of Sheffield, UK
Editors: Cathie Carmichael, University of East Anglia, UK, Christian Gerlach, University of Bern, Switzerland, Simone Gigliotti, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand, Dirk Moses, University of Sydney, Australia and Dan Stone, Royal Holloway, University of London, UK
Volume 12, 4 issues per year
Print ISSN: 1462-3528, Online ISSN: 1469-9494
Journal of Genocide Research promotes an interdisciplinary and comparative approach to the study of genocide. Genocide has reared its head numerous times throughout the twentieth century. Genocidal thought and action have found many opportunities to assault targeted groups and endanger their existence. These repeated attempts at annihilation pose some of the most perplexing questions of the modern age, as well as challenging questions about the use and abuse of the language of modern warfare. "The Journal of Genocide Research devotes itself exclusively to focusing on this phenomenon that promises to re-occur well into the twenty-first century."
