Edited by Kristine Hoglund and Magnus Öberg, both at Uppsala University, Sweden

This textbook provides a comprehensive overview of different methods and sources of information-gathering for peace and conflict students and researchers, as well as the challenges presented by such work.

Understanding Peace Research
Methods and Challenges
Edited by Kristine Hoglund and Magnus Öberg, both at Uppsala University, Sweden

This textbook provides a comprehensive overview of different methods and sources of information-gathering for peace and conflict students and researchers, as well as the challenges presented by such work.

This new Reader aims to guide students through some of the key readings on the subject of terrorism and political violence. In an age when there is more written about terrorism than anyone can possibly read in a lifetime, it has become increasingly difficult for students and scholars to navigate the literature. At the same time, courses and modules on terrorism studies are developing at a rapid rate. To meet this challenge, this wide-ranging Reader seeks to equip the aspiring student, based anywhere in the world, with a comprehensive introduction to the study of terrorism. Containing many of the most influential and groundbreaking studies from the world’s leading experts, drawn from several academic disciplines, this volume is the essential companion for any student of terrorism and political violence.

The Reader, which starts with a detailed Introduction by the editors, is divided into seven sections, each of which contains a short introduction as well as a guide to further reading and student discussion questions:

- Terrorism in Historical Context
- Definitions
- Understanding and Explaining Terrorism
- Terrorist Movements
- Terrorist Behaviour
- Counterterrorism
- Current and Future Trends in Terrorism

This Reader will be essential reading for students of Terrorism and Political Violence, and highly recommended for students of Security Studies, War and Conflict Studies and Political Science in general, as well as for practitioners in the field of counter-terrorism and homeland security.

Selected Contents:

1. Part 1. Terrorism in Historical Context
2. Part 2. Definitions
3. Part 3. Understanding and Explaining Terrorism
4. Part 4. Terrorist Movements
5. Part 5. Terrorist Behaviour
6. Part 7. Counterterrorism

Chinese Foreign Policy
An Introduction
Marc Lanteigne

This textbook is an introduction to the study of contemporary Chinese foreign policy. Examining the patterns of engagement with various domestic and international actors that have shaped Beijing’s foreign policy since the Cold War, it explores a series of ongoing questions and trends, as well as offering an in-depth look at key points of China’s current global relations.

Bringing together the many different facets of China’s foreign interests, the volume presents a comprehensive overview of the country’s international affairs, covering such key issues as:

- the rise of globalization
- the country’s bilateral and multilateral approaches to international problem-solving
- the increase in the number and types of international regimes
- modern security challenges

Constructing a Security Community in Southeast Asia

Amitav Acharya, American University, USA

Series: Politics in Asia

Reviews of the first edition:

‘This is a superb study of ASEAN and the main issues that it faces. Acharya provides great insight into key episodes in ASEAN’s development with thorough research and cogent analysis...This book must now be considered the authoritative text on the subject of regional organization in Southeast Asia.’ - Journal of the Humanities and Social Sciences of Southeast Asia and Oceania

‘Innovative and stimulating...the theoretical and empirical sophistication that Acharya displays makes this book sure to be a key work on the security and political aspects of ASEAN for academics and policymakers...a vivid and cutting-edge work’ - American Political Science Review

This second edition of Constructing a Security Community in Southeast Asia takes the excellent framework from Acharya’s first edition and brings it up-to-date, looking at ASEAN’s comprehensive and critical account of the evolution of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) norms and the viability of the ASEAN way of conflict management.

Key issues in determining the future stability of the Southeast Asian and Asia Pacific region are covered, including:

- intra-regional relations and the effect of membership expansion
- the ASEAN Regional Forum and East Asian regionalism
- ASEAN’s response to terrorism and other transnational challenges
- debates over ASEAN’s non-interference doctrine
- the ‘ASEAN Security Community’ and the ASEAN Charter
- the impact of the rise of China and India and ASEAN’s relations with the US and Japan.

The new edition will continue to appeal to students and scholars of Asian security, international relations theory and Southeast Asian studies as well as policymakers and the media.

Modern Military Strategy
An Introduction

Elino Sloan, Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada

This book provides a coherent, integrated introductory textbook on post-Cold War strategic theory for upper-level students seeking an initial understanding of strategic studies. Dramatic changes and developments in the international security environment over the past decade and a half have created the need to examine the ideas of more contemporary strategic thinkers, and to revise the key textbooks of strategic thought. This book examines modern strategic thought, each chapter covering a different theme, and the text centres on the ideas of key strategic thinkers within this functional theme, as well as concepts within the functional theme that are not necessarily associated with a specific thinker.

There is no one volume that provides a comprehensive yet accessible overview and examination of strategic thought in the period since the end of the Cold War. This book aims to fill this key gap in the literature.

This book will be essential reading for students of strategic studies, war studies and military history, and highly recommended for students of security studies and IR in general.

Understanding Contemporary Strategy

Thomas M. Kane and David J. Lonsdale, both at University of Hull, UK

Understanding Contemporary Strategy provides an accessible and comprehensive introduction to the theory and practice of modern strategy. Covering all the main issues in the field, the book explores the major themes through a combination of classical and modern strategic theory, history and current practice. The book is split into three main sections:

• Definition and context: including discussion of the human, technological, intelligence, ethical and grand-strategic dimensions.
• Strategy in the geographic environments: land, sea, air and space.
• Contemporary strategic challenges: terrorism, insurgency and nuclear strategy.

Each chapter presents the reader with a succinct summary of the topic, but also provides a challenging analysis of current issues, supporting students with pedagogical features such as suggested further reading, boxed case studies and study questions.

This book will be essential reading for upper-level students of strategic studies, war studies, military history and international security.

Textbook

Understanding Counterinsurgency

Doctrine, Operations, and Challenges

Edited by Thomas Rid, American Academy, Berlin, Germany and Thomas Keane, Johns Hopkins University, USA

This textbook offers an accessible introduction to counterinsurgency operations, a key aspect of modern warfare. Featuring essays by some of the world’s leading experts on unconventional conflict, both scholars and practitioners, the book discusses how modern regular armed forces react, and should react, to irregular warfare. The volume is divided into three main sections:

• Doctrinal Origins: analysing the intellectual and historical roots of modern Western theory and practice
• Operational Aspects: examining the specific role of various military services in counterinsurgency, but also special forces, intelligence, and local security forces
• Challenges: looking at wider issues, such as governance, culture, ethics, civil-military cooperation, information operations, and time

Understanding Counterinsurgency is the first comprehensive textbook on counterinsurgency, and will be essential reading for all students of small wars, counterinsurgency and counterterrorism, strategic studies and security studies, both in graduate and undergraduate courses as well as in professional military schools.

Settlement along the Trigger Line
Approaches to the Allocation and Delimitation of the Border between the Kurdish Region and Iraq

Ewan Anderson, University of Durham, York St John University, and University of Exeter, UK and Liam Anderson, Wright State University, Dayton, Ohio, USA

The process for resolving the future status of Kirkuk and other disputed territories has reached an impasse. On several occasions over the last two years, tense stand-offs between Iraqi government forces and Kurdish peshmerga have threatened to escalate into full-blown military confrontations. A flexible approach is needed to provide a stable and durable solution to the problem. By investigating and assessing the core problems concerning the disputed territories in the boundary zone, including administrative changes, boundary adjustments and the process of Arbitration since 1958, the book offers ideas, approaches and procedures that the parties may adopt. Precedents set in other boundary settlements are included and examined in the light of their application to the Kurdish boundary.

The Future of Afghanistan after 2014

Nicholas Redman and Toby Dodge, both at International Institute of Strategic Studies (IISS), UK

From July 2011 to the end of 2014, the United States and NATO are committed to handing over full responsibility for the security, governance and economic development of Afghanistan to the Afghan government. This will bring to an end the thirteen year struggle by the U.S. and the international community to stabilise the country and rebuild the state after invasion and regime change in 2001. This edited Adelphi brings together the global expertise of the International Institute for Strategic Studies to examine what the political, military and economic future of Afghanistan will be after the international community drastically reduces its presence in the run up to 2014. Individual chapters examine both the domestic political and strategic dynamics that will shape Afghanistan’s future and the major regional powers interactions with the country’s government and society. Three chapters will be devoted to domestic Afghan issues.

The Future of Asia-Pacific Sea Power

Geoffrey Till, Joint Services Command and Staff College and Kings College London, UK

Navies are going through a period of radical change, in large part due to new technologies and the effects of globalization. In this changing strategic context, a collaborative approach to maintaining good order at sea needs to be sustained, by navies acting with, rather than against each other, by the development of specialized fleets, and by the acceptance of shared R&D and production in naval equipment. At the same time, increasing concerns about national energy security and the survival of more traditional national security concerns suggest a continued focus on older conceptions of sea control and much more exclusive views of maritime security. This Adelphi will explore the tensions between these approaches, with particular reference to the naval interactions of the United States, China, Japan and India, especially in the waters around Southeast and Northeast Asia.

The Rise of Naval Power in Asia-Pacific

Geoffrey Till, Joint Services Command and Staff College and Kings College London, UK

The navies of China, India and to a lesser extent Japan are expanding rapidly at present. This has the potential to alter the US-dominated naval balance in Asia-Pacific but it also raises a question: are the region’s powers involved in a naval arms race? Naval development is and always has been a crucial indicator of economic and political development. It shows the emergence of a significant shift in strategic weight from West to East. But within the Asia-Pacific Region, alongside growing economic and institutional integration, there are geo-political tensions that threaten the regions stability and peace. The balance between the two determines the form that naval development in that region is taking. Some aspects of this suggest the beginnings of a naval arms race that would have profound consequences for the region and the world.

Yemen and the Politics of Permanent Crisis

Sarah Phillips, University of Sydney, Australia

The Middle East is in the midst of considerable and unpredictable changes, but deeply patrimonial political systems do not change overnight - and neither do the international and regional structures that have helped them to endure for so long. The informal rules that guide Yemeni society and its dysfunctional political system suggest a continued focus on older conceptions of sea control and much more exclusive views of maritime security. This Adelphi will explore the tensions between these approaches, with particular reference to the naval interactions of the United States, China, Japan and India, especially in the waters around Southeast and Northeast Asia.

Drawing on research carried out on the ground in Yemen, this Adelphi examines the shadowy structures that govern political life and sustain a network of social elites predisposed against any far-reaching systemic reform. It looks behind the scenes at the regime’s opaque internal politics, at its entrenched patronage system and at the ‘rules of the game’ that will shape the behaviour of the post-Saleh rulers, to offer insights for how the West may better engage within that game.

Bush's Foreign and Security Policy

Principle or Partisanship?

Donette Murray, Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst, Camberley, UK

This book offers a fresh assessment of the Bush presidency that builds on the 'first cut of history' and the growing collection of memoirs and personal accounts purporting to explain America’s 43rd president. This account challenges readers to look more closely at the strengths and weaknesses of Bush’s two-term administration. The book is intended as a critique, not a criticism, of the Bush administration. Significantly, it will be one of the first books to surpass the ‘rush to judgement’ accounts, by dealing comprehensively and reflectively with the whole Bush Presidency.

The Security Governance of Regional Organizations
Edited by Emil J. Kirchner, University of Essex, UK and Roberto Dominguez
Series: Global Institutions
The Security Governance of Regional Organizations assesses the effectiveness of regional organizations as regional or global security providers, and examines how policy preferences, resources, capabilities, institutional mechanisms and economic and political cohesion link with collective action behaviour in four security policy functions. It investigates how regional organizations meet the new security threats or respond to strategic geopolitical changes and what adaptations they make in the process. Divided into three parts and using a common analytical framework, the book explains the changing security agenda in ten key regional organizations, each organizationized chapter:
• identifies the nature of threats within the region
• examines the historical development and the degree of institutionalization
• assesses the level of governance
• explores the context of interaction
• investigates the compliance with the norms of the system of governance.
This collection contributes to the ongoing reconceptualization of security of definition of security governance, and explores whether regional security governance processes are unique or similar and whether some organizational experiences can be seen as models for others to follow. It combines a coherent theoretical framework with strong comparative case studies, making it ideal reading for all students of security studies.

Power and Progress

International Politics in Transition

Jack Snyder, Columbia University, USA

This book draws together many of Jack Snyder's essays to create a coherent volume that explores a liberal realist theory of international politics. It tackles the question of change in a heterogeneous, incompletely modern international system from a perspective that draws on realism in stressing pragmatism in tactics and on liberalism in defining the ultimate goals of change. The book features a new introduction that explains the general themes that unify the prescriptive articles on international justice, the marketplace of ideas, and democratization and is divided into three parts that explore:

- Anarchy and Its Effects.
- The Challenges of Democratic Consolidation.
- Empire and the Promotion of a Liberal Order.

This fascinating and must-have collection will be of interest to students and scholars of international relations, especially those interested in the debates on liberalism and realism, and comparative politics.

Liberal Peace
Selected Essays

Michael W. Doyle, Columbia University, New York, USA

'Ronald Reagan, Bill Clinton, and George W. Bush extolled the peaceful virtues of democracy, but the track record is mixed. In this thoughtful book, Michael Doyle sorts through the arguments in a convincing manner, and makes a powerful case for a liberal peace. This book demonstrates yet again why Doyle is one of today's leading theorists of international affairs.' - Joseph S. Nye, Jr., Harvard University, USA

Comprising essays by Michael W. Doyle, Liberal Peace examines the special significance of liberalism for international relations.

The volume considers when force should and should not be used to promote national security and human security and how liberal states have maintained peace among themselves while at the same time being prone to making war against non-liberal states. Exploring policy implications, the author focuses on the strategic value of the inter-liberal democratic community and how it can be protected, preserved, and enlarged, and whether liberals can go beyond a separate peace to a more integrated global democracy. Finally, the volume considers when force should and should not be used to promote national security and human security across borders, and argues against President George W. Bush's policy of 'transformative' interventions. The concluding essay engages with scholarly critics of the liberal democratic peace.

This book will be of great interest to students of international relations, foreign policy, political philosophy, and security studies.

War and Ideas
Selected essays

John Mueller, Ohio State University, USA

'Over the years many of the most important ideas about the role of ideas have come from the pen of John Mueller. Now he has drawn them together in a most valuable collection, and those who remain unpersuaded will fruitfully be provoked.' - Robert Jervis, Columbia University, USA

'A pioneer in the work on public opinion and war, Mueller has staked out intellectual leadership in thinking about the “obsolescence” of war. An excellent writer, Mueller’s pieces very clearly and effectively convey his arguments and conclusions. This book will be a valuable resource for instructors and students alike in courses ranging from general introductory IR, to courses on war, globalization or international law.' - Harvey Starr, University of South Carolina, USA

'War and Ideas is a set of provocative theoretical essays and empirical analyses by one of the leading and most original thinkers in international relations inquiry. It is a book that will provoke debate and challenge conventional thinking: in doing so, it will advance our understanding of some of the most important issues of our time. Essential reading for scholars, journalists, and students.' - John A. Vasquez, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, USA

This book collects the key essays, together with updating notes and commentary, of Professor John Mueller on war and the role of ideas and opinions.

Mueller has maintained that war (and peace) are, in essence, merely ideas, and that war has waned as the notion that ‘peace’ is a decided good idea has gained currency. The first part of the book extends this argument, noting that as ideas have spread, war is losing out not only in the developed world, but now in the developing one, and that even civil war is in marked decline. It also assesses and critiques theories arguing that this phenomenon is caused by the rising acceptance of democracy and/or capitalism.

The second part argues that the Cold War was at base a clash of ideas that were seen to be threatening, not of arms balances, domestic systems, geography, or international structure. It also maintains that there has been a considerable tendency to exaggerate security threats - currently, in particular, the one presented by international terrorism - and to see them in excessively military terms.

The third section deals with the role public opinion plays in foreign policy, and argues that many earlier conclusions about opinion during the Korean and Vietnam Wars, including especially ones concerning the importance of casualties in determining popular support for war, apply to more recent military ventures in the Persian Gulf, Bosnia, Iraq, and Afghanistan. It also assesses the difficulties leaders and idea entrepreneurs often encounter when they try to manage or manipulate public opinion.

This book will be of much interest to students of international relations, security studies, foreign policy and international history.

Somalia: State Collapse, Terrorism and Piracy
Edited by Brian J. Hesse, Northwest Missouri State University, USA

The situation in Somalia today embodies some of the most pressing issues in international relations. How should the international community deal with the collapsed state that is Somalia? From the presence of al-Qaeda operatives to pirates, to what extent is Somalia a threat to global peace and commerce? Which aspects of Somalia’s economic, social and political landscape can be considered successful, and how do these ‘success stories’ reflect some of the more problematic issues the country faces?

This book sheds light on all of these topics and more. The book is written to appeal to a wide audience, from specialists in international security, development and/or humanitarian issues, to students and casual readers. Its six contributing authors, with their focus on current events mixed with historical perspective, ensure readers get varying views of what is happening today in the Horn of Africa.

The book was published as a special issue of the Journal of Contemporary African Studies.

INTERNATIONAL SECURITY: NUCLEAR WEAPONS
FORTHCOMING IN 2012
Coping with Nuclear Weapons
Issues and Global Institutions
W. Pal Sidthu, EastWest Institute
Series: Global Institutions
In the recent past there have been several high-profile unilateral, bilateral and multilateral declarations calling for a world free of nuclear weapons, further efforts to prevent proliferation and initiatives to secure nuclear material from falling into the hands of non-state actors, particularly terrorists groups. This work seeks to provide a concise and comprehensive analysis of the role of global institutions in this campaign.
This work:
• provides a brief historical survey of the key international institutions as well as their major achievements
• details the new challenges that confront these institutions, particularly in the post-Cold War world
• analyses examine the role of the ad-hoc arrangements which emerged to address these specific challenges and their impact on the existing international institutions that they were meant to strengthen
• suggests a series of initiatives - both ad-hoc and institutionalized - which could reform and reinvigorate the institutions to carry out their widening and deepening mandates
• evaluates the prospects of these institutions in not only carrying out their basic disarmament and non-proliferation mandates but also establishing the norms and code of conduct for an eventual world free of nuclear weapons.
Seeking to establish the reasons behind the inability of international institutions to carry out their mandates, and examining what will be necessary to ensure the future success of these initiatives, this work is an invaluable resource for all students, scholars and policy makers.

A Perpetual Menace
Nuclear Weapons and International Order
William Walker, University of St. Andrews, UK
‘William Walker has done something special, compelling and persuasive. Perpetual Menace combines political science rigor with literary sensibility. The book is much more than another history of the nuclear era. Rather it is an innovative search for the impact of nuclear capabilities on global political stability. The result is not just original and enlightening, but surprisingly engaging and enjoyable.’ - Aaron Karp, Old Dominion University, USA
Written by a leading scholar in the field of nuclear weapons and international relations, this book examines ‘the problem of order’ arising from the existence of weapons of mass destruction.
This central problem of international order has its origins in the nineteenth century, when industrialization and the emergence of new sciences, technologies and administrative capabilities greatly expanded states’ abilities to inflict injury, ushering in the era of total war. It became acute in the mid-twentieth century, with the invention of the atomic bomb and the pre-eminent role ascribed to nuclear weapons during the Cold War. It became more complex after the end of the Cold War, as power structures shifted, new insecurities emerged, prior ordering strategies were called into question, and as technologies relevant to weapons of mass destruction became more accessible to non-state actors as well as states.
William Walker explores how this problem is conceived by influential actors, how they have tried to fashion solutions in the face of many predicaments, and why those solutions have been deemed effective and ineffective, legitimate and illegitimate, in various times and contexts.

Racial Spectacles: Explorations in Media, Race, and Justice examines the crucial role the media has played in circulating and shaping national dialogues about race through representations of crime and racialized violence. Jonathan Markovitz argues that mass media ‘racial spectacles’ often work to shore up racist stereotypes, but that they also provide opportunities to challenge prevalent conceptions of race, and can be seized upon as vehicles for social protest. This book explores a series of mass media spectacles revolving around the news, prime-time television, Hollywood cinema, and the internet that have either relied upon, reconfigured, or helped to construct collective memories of race, crime, and (in)justice. The case studies explored include the Scottsboro interracial rape case of the 1930s, the Kobe Bryant rape case, the Los Angeles Police Department’s ‘Rampart scandal’, the Abu Ghraib photographs, and a series of racist incidents at the University of California.

This book will prove to be important not only for courses on race and media, but also for any reader interested in issues of the media’s role in social justice.

Promoting Peace, Inciting Violence
The Role of Religion and Media
Jolyon Mitchell, University of Edinburgh, UK
Series: Media, Religion and Culture
This book is about the role that media and religion play in promoting peace and inciting violence. Using a wide range of examples drawn from around the world, it explores:

• how different media contribute to the creation of communicative environments where violence can be incited
• how various media are used to promote peacebuilding
• the ambivalent role of religion in these processes.

It is sometimes suggested that through skilful packaging of religious messages audiences can be turned into more violent or more peaceful citizens. Jolyon Mitchell paints a more complex picture in order to tease out the ambivalence of the sacred’ in a number of different communicative contexts.

Interrogating International Relations
India's Strategic Practice and the Return of History

Jayashree Vivekanandan
Series: War and International Politics in South Asia

The book interrogates the disciplinary biases that inform mainstream International Relations today. Examining the grand strategy of the Mughal empire under Akbar, it argues for a historic-cultural notion of power and critiques IR's tendency to usher in a selective 'return of history'.

Preparing for the Next Asia-Pacific War
Defence Planning in the Twenty-First Century

Stephan Fruhling, Australian National University
Series: Routledge Security in Asia Pacific Series

This book analyses the defence policy statements of three key Asia Pacific powers - the United States, Australia and New Zealand - and shows how uncertainty about the rise of China has influenced current defence planning decisions, and how thinking about the strategic risks associated with China have changed over time. Key issues covered include the difference in approach by the three countries, the degree to which strategic risk emanates from China directly or indirectly from China's wider impact on the region, the consequences for Japan of China's rise, and an assessment of whether the defence planning responses are commensurate with the real degree of risk.

The UN and the Arab-Israeli Conflict

American Hegemony and UN Intervention since 1947

Danilo Di Mauro, European University Institute, Italy

This book provides a comprehensive empirical analysis of the United Nations intervention in the Arab-Israeli conflict since 1947. In his structured and exhaustive analysis, the author presents a long term perspective on the UN intervention in the conflict and explains its evolution during the last sixty years. He draws on a wealth of qualitative data to provide a complete picture of resolutions addressed to the Arab-Israeli conflict by the General Assembly and the Security Council, the mediation activity, and the UN peace missions in the area. Through his analysis, Di Mauro addresses such questions as:

- Why did the United Nations have different involvement and efforts of interventions in the conflict?
- How did the role of the UN change during the dispute, and why did it change?
- Is there still a role for the UN in the Palestinian-Israeli peace process?

The Israel-Palestine Conflict

Parallel Discourses

Edited by Elizabeth Matthews, California State University, San Marcos, USA, with David Newman and Mohammed Dajani Daoudi

Series: UCLA Center for Middle East Development (CMED) series

The conflict between the Israelis and the Palestinians is considered intractable by many, and is frequently characterised by the violence between the two sides. In attempts at peace, the starting point for negotiations is a cessation of violence; beneath this, however, lies a plethora of other issues to be addressed.

This unique text brings together Israeli and Palestinian viewpoints on a number of key issues and topics, making clear the points of agreement as well as the views that divide. The chapters deal first with three issues that require compromise and resolution for a peace treaty to be realized: water, refugees, and borders, territory and settlements - and then with three important concepts that can either impede or promote peace: democracy, human rights, and peace culture and education. Thus, the book provides an invaluable opportunity to understand, at least in part, the divergent and even convergent interests and understandings of Israelis and Palestinians on issues and concepts important to the peace process. As such, it will be a valuable resource for courses on conflict resolution, the Middle East peace process, and political science.

Contemporary European Security
David J. Galbreath, University of Aberdeen, UK

European security is a complex network of insecurities, institutions and initiatives. Europe is faced with the traditional insecurities of inter- and intra-state conflict as well as non-state threats to security such as environmental, health and human security. The region’s attempts to combat these insecurities have been to develop and foster regional institutions, such as the EU, NATO, OSCE and even the Council of Europe. In turn, member-states and the institutions have set out various ways to combat a range of insecurities from ethnic conflict to human trafficking.

This text explores the complex European security architecture with an eye on introducing students to the empirical, theoretical and conceptual approaches to European security.

4 Volume Set

Critical Security Studies

Edited by Nick Vaughan-Williams, University of Warwick, UK and Columbia Peoples

Series: Critical Concepts in Military, Strategic, and Security Studies

Although prominent—some would argue pre-eminent—within the modern political lexicon, the concept of ‘security’ is complex and contested. While the meaning and reference point of security was once largely taken for granted within International Relations, the past thirty years or so have witnessed the growth of a range of approaches that refuse to take this concept and its application as self-evident. Instead, serious scholarship, often grouped under the rubric of ‘Critical Security Studies’, has sought to question and critique dominant conceptions of security, to introduce new theoretical approaches to the assessment of security discourses and practices, and to expand the range of issues considered within security analysis. This new four-volume collection from Routledge provides a timely anthology of the discipline’s best and most influential scholarship to help users make sense of a now dizzyingly large body of literature and a continuing explosion in research output. Bringing together these major works in one easy-to-use reference resource, the collection illuminates the sometimes complex debates within and between different critical approaches to security, where even the meaning, form, and function of critique is itself contested. And, rather than attempting to impose a unitary or monolithic understanding of Critical Security Studies, the collection editors have instead captured the diversity and vibrancy of critical research on security by grouping the gathered materials into four interrelated themes: defining, deepening, broadening, and extending security.

Volume I (‘Defining Security’), collects a variety of critical perspectives on the meaning of the concept of security. Volume II (‘Deepening Security’), gathers assessments of the appropriate point of reference for security that range from the individual to the global level. The third volume presents arguments for and against the ‘broadening’ of security to include issues such as environmental degradation, migration, and health, while Volume IV (‘Extending Security’) brings together materials that have sought to extend existing critical approaches, and to expand further the disciplinary boundaries of Security Studies.

The collection is fully indexed and includes a comprehensive introduction that places the collected material in its historical and intellectual context. It is destined to be valued by students, teachers, and researchers of Security Studies—as well as those working in contiguous fields—as a vital and unique resource.

Global Politics and the Responsibility to Protect

From Words to Deeds

Alex J. Bellamy, Griffith University, Australia

This book provides an in-depth introduction to, and analysis of, the issues relating to the implementation of the recently adopted Responsibility to Protect principle in international relations. Concentrating mainly on implementation challenges including the prevention of genocide and mass atrocities, strengthening the UN's capacity to respond, and the role of regional organizations, this book introduces readers to contemporary debates on R2P and provides the first book-length analysis of the implementation agenda. The book will be of great interest to students of the responsibility to protect, humanitarian intervention, human rights, foreign policy, security studies and IR and politics in general.

Responsibility to Protect

Cultural Perspectives in the Global South

Edited by Rama Mani, Oxford University, UK and Thomas G. Weiss, City University of New York, USA

Series: Global Institutions

This volume explores in a novel and challenging way the emerging norm of the Responsibility to Protect (R2P), initially adopted by the United Nations World Summit in 2005 following significant debate throughout the preceding decade. This work seeks to uncover whether this norm and its founding values have resonance and grounding within diverse cultures and within the experiences of societies that have directly been torn apart by mass atrocity crimes. The contributors to this collection analyze the responsibility to protect through multiple disciplines—philosophy, religion and spirituality, anthropology, and aesthetics in addition to international relations and law—to explore what light alternative perspectives outside of political science and international relations shed upon this emerging norm.

In each case, the disciplinary analysis emanates from the global south and from scholars located within countries that experienced violent political upheaval. Hence, they draw upon not only theory but also the first-hand experience with conscience-shocking crimes. Their retrospective and prospective analyses could and should help shape the future implementation of R2P in accordance with insights from vastly different contexts.

Offering a cutting edge contribution to thinking in the area, this is essential reading for all those with an interest in humanitarian intervention, peace and conflict studies, critical security studies and peacebuilding.

Global Politics and the Responsibility to Protect

Norms, Laws and the Use of Force in International Politics

Ramesh Thakur, Australian National University, Canberra

This volume is a collection of the key writings of Professor Ramesh Thakur on norms and laws regulating the international use of force.

The adoption of the Responsibility to Protect (R2P) principle by world leaders assembled at the UN summit in 2005 is widely acknowledged to represent one of the great normative advances in international politics since 1945. The author has been involved in this shift from the dominant norm of non-intervention to R2P as an actor, public intellectual and academic and has been a key thinker in this process. These essays represent the author’s writings on R2P including reference to test cases as they arose, such as with Cyclone Nargis in Myanmar in 2008. Comprising essays by a key thinker and agent in the Responsibility to Protect debates, this book will be of much interest to students of international politics, human rights, international law, war and conflict studies, international security and IR in general.

Human Security, Transnational Crime and Human Trafficking
Asian and Western Perspectives
Edited by Shiro Okubo, Ritsumeikan University, Japan and Louise Shelley, George Mason University, USA
Series: Routledge Transnational Crime and Corruption
This book fills a gap in the current literature by examining transnational crime, human trafficking and its implications for human security from both Western and Asian perspectives. The book:
• provides an outline of the overall picture of organized crime and human trafficking in the contemporary world, examining the current trends and recent developments
• contrasts the experience and perception of these problems in Asia with those in the West, by analyzing the distinctive Japanese perspective on globalization, human security and transnational crime
• examines the policy responses of key states and international institutions in Germany, Canada, the United States, the European Union, Japan, and Korea.

America’s Freedom Agenda Towards the Middle East Democracy or Domination
Oz Hassan, University of Warwick, UK
This book generates a greater understanding, and critique, of the George W. Bush administration’s Freedom Agenda for the Middle East and North Africa. It looks at how and why the Bush administration constructed democracy promotion for the Middle East as an American national interest. It then proceeds to demonstrate how new institutions were created, within the American foreign policy bureaucracy, which pursued a particular mode of democratisation that would be congruent with other American national interests.
As such, it highlights how the crisis presented by September 11 2001 led to regime change in Afghanistan and Iraq, but more broadly how American policy towards the region had a softer imperial side, which drew on broader economic theories of democratisation and modernisation.

Constructing US Foreign Policy
The Curious Case of Cuba
David Bernell, Oregon State University, USA
This book addresses the roots of the hostility that has characterized the United States’relationship with Cuba and has persisted for decades, even in the wake of the end of the Cold War. It answers the question of why America’s Cold War era policy toward Cuba has not substantially changed, despite a radically changed international environment. Cuba is indeed a ‘curious case,’ as the title suggests, and the book uses it to shed light on the contours and paradoxes of US policy during the Cold War and beyond.

Prevention, Pre-Emption and the Nuclear Option
From Bush to Obama
Aiden Warren, RMIT, Australia
Despite its portrayal as a bold departure, the Bush Doctrine was not the ‘new’ or ‘revolutionary’ policy instrument that many at the time portrayed. This work seeks to argue that while it was clear that the Bush Doctrine certainly qualified as a preventive war policy, it is apparent that the adoption of this strategy did not mark a total break with American tradition or earlier Administrations.

TEXTBOOK

Transatlantic Relations since 1945
An Introduction
Jussi Hanhimaki, Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, Geneva, Switzerland, Benedikt Schoenborn, University of Tampere, Finland and Barbara Zanchetta, Finnish Institute of International Affairs, Helsinki

The transatlantic relationship has been the bedrock of international relations since the end of World War II. This new textbook will focus on the period since the defeat of Nazi Germany, when the multitude of links between United States and Western Europe were created, extended, and multiplied. Written by three Europeans, it emphasizes transatlantic interactions, and avoids the temptation to focus on either U.S. ‘domination’ or European attempts to ‘resist’ an American effort to subjugate the old continent. That influence has travelled across the Atlantic in both directions is one of the starting points of this text.

Structured chronologically, the book will be built around three key themes:
• Security: From the Cold War to the War on Terror.
• Economics: Integration and Competition.
• ‘Soft power’ and Transatlantic Relations.

This book will be the first comprehensive account of transatlantic relations in the second half of the 20th century (extending to the present day). It will be of great interest to students of transatlantic relations, NATO, US Foreign Policy, Cold War History, European History and IR/International history.

Mexico’s Security Failure
Collapse into Criminal Violence
Edited by Paul Kenny, Monica Serrano, El Colegio de México, Mexico and Arturo C. Sotomayor, Naval Postgraduate School, USA

Mexico has failed to achieve internal security and poses a serious threat to its neighbors. This volume takes us inside the Mexican state to explain the failure there, but also reaches out to assess the impact of Mexico’s security failure beyond its borders. The key innovative idea of the book—security failure—brings these perspectives together on an intermestic level of analysis. It is a view that runs counter to the standard emphasis on the external, trans-national nature of criminal threats to a largely inert state.

Mexico’s Security Failure is both timely, with Mexico much in the news, but also of lasting value. It explains Mexican insecurity in a full-dimensional manner that hasn’t been attempted before. Mexico received much scholarly attention a decade ago with the onset of democratization. Since then, the leading topic has become immigration. However, the security environment compelling many Mexicans to leave has been dramatically understudied. This tightly organized volume begins to correct that gap.

Indian Foreign Policy
The Politics of Postcolonial Identity
Priya Chacko, University of Witwatersrand, South Africa

Conflict, Security and Development
An Introduction

Danielle Beswick and Paul Jackson, both at University of Birmingham, UK

This textbook draws on academic theory, field research and policy developments to provide an overview of the connections between security and development, before, during and after conflict. Academics and policymakers increasingly argue that security and development are closely related and therefore cannot be achieved independently of each other. This book uniquely combines academic teaching and approaches with practical policy experience in three key ways:

• uses the best of recent academic theory, field research and policy to provide an overview of the connections between security and development
• explores the implications of these connections for the theory and practice of development
• investigates the challenges that arise for post-conflict reconstruction when we recognise that security and development are mutually contingent.

The authors are experienced in both the theory and practice of development and conflict, and illustrate the theory about the links between conflict, security and development with practical examples, drawing on key case studies from the past 20 years. Each chapter is informed by student pedagogy and the book will be essential reading for all students of development studies, war and conflict studies, and human security, and is recommended for students of international security and IR in general.

Theories of Violent Conflict
An Introduction

Jolle Demmers, Utrecht University, the Netherlands

This textbook introduces students of violent conflict to a variety of prominent theoretical approaches, and to examine the ontological stances and epistemological traditions underlying these approaches. In reviewing theories of conflict, this book takes the centrality of the group as actor in contemporary conflict as a point of departure. In the post-Cold War shift from inter-state to intra-state conflict, the key role of the group - ethnic, religious, cultural and other - in most conflicts is widely acknowledged: of the 118 conflicts that have taken place between 1989 and 2004, only 7 have been inter-state wars. This implies that any meaningful analysis of contemporary conflict should involve the study of identity group formation, dynamics of interaction and collective action.

We are left with three main questions from this departure point:

• What makes a group?
• Why and how does a group resort to violence?
• Why and how do or don’t they stop?

This book aims to examine and compare the ways by which these questions are addressed from a number of prominent research perspectives: constructivism, social identity theory, structuralism, political economy, human needs theory, relativist deprivation theory, collective action theory, and rational choice theory. The final chapter of the book aims to synthesize structure and agency-based theories by proposing a constructionist approach to violent conflict.

This book will be essential reading for students of war and conflict studies, peace studies, conflict analysis and conflict resolution, and ethnic conflict, as well as security studies and IR in general.

A Post-Liberal Peace

Olive P. Richmond, University of St. Andrews, UK

“Much of the credit for the seismic shift in reconceptualising peace and peacebuilding must go to Oliver Richmond. His latest book answers, head-on, the anti-political fatalism that there is no, or no easy route to a liberal peace.” - Michael Pugh, University of Bradford, UK

The liberal nature of post-conflict reconstruction has become a much discussed topic. Oliver Richmond is among the most authoritative contributors to the respective debates, pointing towards the dangers of a top-down, state-centric and market-driven approach. A Post-Liberal Peace offers his most comprehensive take so far. He convincingly illumines, in particular, how local practices of resistance can contribute to what he calls a post-liberal peace: a hybrid arrangement that allows local actors to make reconstruction more sustainable than it could ever be through a mere external imposition of liberal institutions and procedures. - Roland Bleiker, University of Queensland, Australia

The Continuing Crisis in Darfur

Johan Brosché, Uppsala University, Sweden and Daniel Rothbart, George Mason University, USA

The book explains the sources of the genocide in Darfur, and examines the situation from a novel perspective in which the crisis itself is defined as a complexity of four distinct, yet interlacing, conflicts.

The book also addresses the peace initiatives undertaken by the international community, especially the diplomatic efforts of neighboring African states, the United Nations, the United States, and the European Union. Indications of key figures by the international Criminal Court are explored. Special attention is given to attempts to redress the fragmentation among the groups opposing the government through informal initiatives by unofficial intermediaries at the “track two” level of diplomacy.

Bridging Top-Down and Bottom-Up Approaches

Edited by Bruno Charbonneau and Genevieve Parent, both at Larentian University, Canada

This book aims to bridge the gap between what are generally referred to as ‘top-down’ and ‘bottom-up’ approaches to peacebuilding.

Peacebuilding, Memory and Reconciliation explores the inextricable link between psychological recovery and socio-political reconciliation, and the political issues that dominate this relationship. Through an examination of the construction of social narratives about or for peace, the text offers a new perspective on peacebuilding, which challenges and questions the very nature of the dichotomy between ‘top-down’ and ‘bottom-up’ approaches.

The Peace In Between

Post-War Violence and Peacebuilding

Edited by Mats Berdal, King’s College London, UK and Astri Suhrke, Chr. Michelsen Institute, Bergen, Norway

“Postwar peace is never easy and only rarely fully consolidated. In this important new collection of wide-ranging case studies, editors Astri Suhrke and Mats Berdal demonstrate the added-value of disaggregating peace into four distinct categories - peace imposed by victors, challenged by losers, accepted by parties and divided among factions. They show how each has its own challenges and why confusing them can be fatal to mitigating conflict.” - Michael Doyle, Columbia University, USA

“This book has been sorely needed and will be widely read. It is commonplace to cite examples like El Salvador where post-war levels of violence have been high. But we have not had anything remotely approaching the systematic bringing together of evidence, historical and more recent, confirming how generalised is the phenomenon of post-war violence.” - Christopher Cramer, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, UK

“This volume does a superb job of investigating a question that is critically important both to scholars and policy practitioners: what causes the violence that often continues, in various forms, after the formal termination of wars?” - Roland Paris, University of Ottawa, Canada

Advancing Peace Research
Leaving Traces, Selected Articles by J. David Singer
Edited by Jody B. Lear, Diane Macaulay and Meredith Reid Sarkees

Professor J. David Singer has been arguably the most important influence on quantitative research into the causes and attributes of war. His pioneering work on the Correlates of War project at the University of Michigan and his numerous books and articles have inspired generations of researchers in the fields of international relations, conflict analysis, security studies and peace science.

This collection is a carefully selected overview of his work which provides not only an excellent introduction to his considerable methodological, theoretical and empirical contributions but also an intellectual history of developments in the field of international relations which are reflected in Professor Singer’s work.

This is essential reading for all those with an interest in the use of quantitative methods in social science, the changing nature of the study of international relations and the analysis of war and peace.

A Micro-Sociology of Violence

Deciphering Patterns and Dynamics of Collective Violence

Edited by Jutta Bakonyi, Deutsche Gesellschaft fur Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ), Germany and Berit Bliessmann de Guevara, Helmut Schmidt University, Hamburg, Germany

This book aims at a deeper understanding of social processes, dynamics and institutions shaping collective violence. It argues that violence is a social practice that adheres to social logics and, in its collective form, appears as recurrent patterns. In search of characteristics, mechanisms and logics of violence, contributions deliver ethnographic descriptions of different forms of collective violence and contextualize these phenomena within broader spatial and temporal structures. The studies show that collective violence, at least if it is sustained over a certain period of time, aims at organization and therefore develops constitutive and integrative mechanisms.

STATEBUILDING

The Ethics of War and Peace
An Introduction
Helen Frowe, University of Kent, UK

‘A tour de force, which engages in a fascinating discussion of the complex moral and ethical dilemmas associated with just war theory. Especially noteworthy is the discussion of the morality of terrorism, particularly in view of the killing of Osama bin Laden. The book succeeds brilliantly in setting out the major issues involved in the contemporary debates about just war theory and in revising the orthodox school as represented by Michael Walzer.’ - Robert Weiner, University of Massachusetts - Boston, USA

“This is a thorough introduction to contemporary philosophical debates relating to the ethics of war and peace that should appeal to philosophy students and may be adopted by courses in that field. It is well written and argued in a good philosophical style.” - Alex Bellamy, University of Queensland, Australia

When is it right to go to war? When is a war illegal? What are the rules of engagement? What should happen when a war is over? How should we view terrorism? The Ethics of War and Peace is a fresh and contemporary introduction to one of the oldest but still most relevant ethical debates. It introduces students to contemporary Just War Theory in a stimulating and engaging way, perfect for those approaching the topic for the first time.

Helen Frowe explains the core issues in Just War Theory, and chapter by chapter examines the recent and ongoing philosophical debates on:

- theories of self defence and national defence
- jus ad Bellum, jus in Bello, and jus post Bellum
- the moral status of combatants
- the principle of non-combatant immunity
- the nature of terrorism and the moral status of terrorists.

Each chapter concludes with a useful summary, discussion questions and suggestions for further reading, to aid student learning and revision. The Ethics of War and Peace is the ideal textbook for students studying philosophy, politics and international relations.

Terrorism: The Basics

James Lutz, Indiana University, USA and Brenda J. Lutz, Indiana University-Purdue, USA

Series: The Basics

Terrorism: The Basics is an ideal starting point for anyone interested in one of the most discussed, written about and analysed aspects of modern life. Common misconceptions are dispelled as the authors provide clear and jargon-free answers to the big questions:

- What does terrorism involve?
- Who can be classified as a terrorist?
- What are terrorists trying to achieve?
- Who are the supporters of terrorism?
- Can there ever be an end to terrorist activity?

These questions and more are answered with reference to contemporary groups and situations allowing readers to relate theory to what they have seen on the news. Written with clarity and insight, this book is the perfect first book on terrorism for students of all levels.

This book is an introduction to critical approaches to terrorism studies. The book's objective is to present a diverse and useful set of readings for students interested in studying terrorism through a critical lens.

The Psychology of Terrorism

John Horgan

This new edition of John Horgan's critically acclaimed The Psychology of Terrorism is one of the best applications of a social science discipline (in this case, psychology) to explain the drivers that motivate individuals to become terrorists, function as terrorists, and, in ideal cases, disengage from terrorism. Also included are some of the best treatments in the academic literature on how to define terrorism and conduct academic research on terrorism.

Critical Terrorism Studies

An Introduction to Research Methods

Jacob L. Stump, Shepherd University, USA and Priya Dixit, American University, Washington DC, USA

This book is an introduction to critical approaches to terrorism studies. Introducing students to important developments in the critical study of terrorism, the book has three key themes: (1) the position of critical terrorism studies within the discipline of International Relations (IR), (2) theoretical and methodological elaborations of critical approaches to the study of terrorism; (3) empirical illustrations of those approaches. The book's objective is to present a diverse and useful set of readings for students interested in studying terrorism through a critical lens.

Mainstream books on terrorism provide little or no information about the new critical approaches, and this book aims to fill that vacuum. It provides material that students and teachers can use to begin learning the diverse ways to critically and rigorously study terrorism. At the same time, each chapter will have empirical examples that illustrate how each of these methodologies has been applied in practice. In sum, the book reviews a series of non-variable based methodological approaches and it provides empirical examples that illustrate how these approaches have been and can be utilized by students, teachers, and postgraduate researchers alike.

This book will be of much interest to students of EU studies, sociology, critical security studies, and IR in general.

Counterterrorism in Turkey
Policy Choices and Policy Effects toward the Kurdish Workers’ Party (PKK)
Mustafa Cosar Unal, Intelligence Department, Turkish National Police
Series: Extremism and Democracy

This book proposes an inclusive way of examining Turkish Government’s counterterrorism policies toward the Kurdish Workers Party (PKK), a guerilla insurgency and terrorist group. Contrary to most of the counterterrorism studies that focused on single aspect of the phenomenon, this book offers multi-level analyses from multiple perspectives using both, quantitative and qualitative data analyses. That is, this study analyzes the Turkish Government’s counterterrorism policies not only from the policies’ perspective but also from the perspective of the PKK’s internal dynamics.

The End of Terrorism?
Leonard Weinberg, University of Nevada, Reno, USA
Series: Extremism and Democracy

This book considers not the beginning or origins of terrorism but how groups that use terrorism end. Terrorism as a tactic is unlikely to disappear, however virtually all the groups that employed terrorist violence during the 1960s and 1970s have passed from the scene in one way or another. Likewise most of the individuals who embarked on ‘careers’ in terrorism over these same years now engage in other pursuits.

The author argues that al-Qaeda and the various violent Islamist groups it has inspired are, like their predecessors, bound to bring their operations to an end. Rather than discussing the deflection or de-radicalization of individuals the book aims to analyze how terrorist groups are defeated, or defeat themselves. It examines the historical record, drawing on a large collection of empirical data to analyze in detail the various ends of these violent organizations.

This book provides a unique empirically informed perspective on the end of terrorism that is a valuable addition to the currently available literature and will be of interest to scholars of terrorism, security studies and international politics.

Narratives of Violence
V.G. Julie Rajan, Rutgers University, USA

‘This is an in-depth, original analysis of the phenomenon of women as terrorists. Rajan explores her subject in a truly interdisciplinary manner. Contemporary Debates on Terrorism
Edited by Richard Jackson, Aberystwyth University, Wales, UK and Samuel J. Sinclair, Harvard Medical School, USA

Contemporary Debates on Terrorism is an innovative new textbook, addressing a number of key issues in contemporary terrorism studies from both ‘traditional’ and ‘critical’ perspectives. In recent years the terrorism studies field has grown significantly, with an increasing number of scholars beginning to debate the complex dynamics underlying this category of violence. Within the broader field, there are many identifiable controversies and issues which divide scholarly opinion, a number of which are discussed in this text:

- Theoretical issues, such as the definition of terrorism and state terrorism.
- Substantive issues, including the threat posed by al Qaeda and the utility of different responses to terrorism.
- Ethical issues, encompassing the torture of terrorist suspects and targeted assassination.

The format of the volume involves a leading scholar taking a particular position on the controversy, followed by an opposing or alternative viewpoint written by another contributor. In addition to the pedagogical value of allowing students to read opposing arguments in one place, the volume will also be important for providing an overview of the state of the field and its key lines of debate.

New Directions in Genocide Research
Adam Jones, University of British Columbia Okanagan, Canada
Genocide studies is a relatively new field of comparative inquiry, but recent years have seen an increasing range of themes and subject-matter being addressed reflecting a variety of features of the field and transformations within it. This edited book brings together established scholars with rising stars and seeks to capture the range of new approaches, theories and case studies in the field.

The book is split into three broad sections:
• Part 1 focuses on broad theories of comparative genocide, covering a number of different perspectives.
• Part 2 critically reconsidered core themes of genocide studies, including humanitarian intervention and the role of bystanders; and unfolds a range of challenging new directions, including the forcible transfer of children as a genocidal strategy, cultural genocide, the art and architecture of genocide, gender and genocide, structural violence, and the novel application of remote-sensing technologies to the detection and study of genocide.
• Part 3 is case-study focused, seeking to place both canonical and little-known cases of genocide in broader comparative perspective. Cases analyzed include genocide in North America, the Nazi Holocaust, the Armenian genocide, and the Sri Lankan genocide.

The combination of cutting-edge scholarship and innovative approaches to familiar subjects makes this essential reading for all students and scholars in the field of genocide studies.

Non-Great Powers in International Politics

The English School and Nordic Internationalism

Annika Bergman-Rosamond, University of Leicester, UK

Series: New International Relations

This book develops a theoretical framework drawn from the English School of international theory to explore the contribution of non-great powers within the international society of states. In doing so the author asks whether the analysis of such actors as well as their distinct contributions to global justice and order, can sustain the normative and analytical rigour of the English School.

Focusing on the Nordic states’ conduct and conceptions of welfare internationalism, the responsibility to protect norm and humanitarian intervention as well as gendered and adjacent forms of internationalisms, this book provides important insights into the co-constitutive relationship between specific agents and the wider sphere of international society. It sheds light on the crucial normative debate between order and justice in international politics and explains the specific roles of ‘non-great powers’ in sustaining, nurturing and constituting international society through their internationalist foreign policies.

Interventions

Series Edited by Jenny Edkins, University of Aberystwyth, UK and Nick Vaughan-Williams, University of Warwick, UK

The series aims to advance understanding of the key areas in which scholars working within broad critical post-structural and post-colonial traditions have chosen to make their interventions, and to present innovative analyses of important topics. Titles in the series engage with critical thinkers in philosophy, sociology, politics and other disciplines and provide situated historical, empirical and textual studies in international politics.

Realism Reader

Colin Elman, Maxwell School of Syracuse University, USA

Despite some years in the doldrums, political realism is recovering its previously dominant role as the leading paradigm in the international relations sub-field. Realism’s return to prominence has been accompanied by a surge of new research, and by the development of several distinct variants within the research tradition.

The Realism Reader will provide a ‘one-stop-shop’ for undergraduates and masters students taking a course in contemporary international relations theory, with a particular focus on realism.

The Reader will collect centrally important realist works, organized around different approaches (for example, neoclassical realism); important critiques of realism (for example, the institutionalist critique); and some debates realists and their critics have engaged in concerning recent events (for example, whether different realist theories can account for the collapse of the Soviet Union and the end of the Cold War).

The Reader integrates further supportive material throughout the text, including commentary, analysis and pedagogy to facilitate student learning.

The Reader will be structured around a 16 week semester. An alternative timetable and chapter combination will be provided for classes following the quarter system.

The US Military
A Basic Introduction
Judith Stiehm, Florida International University, USA

“Judith Stiehm’s book is masterly. It is based on decades of working within the military system, yet somehow speaks cogently and clearly to general audiences. At a time when war is more complex than ever, yet fewer Americans come into contact with the armed forces than at any other time in our modern history as a nation, the timing for this great read could not be better either.” - Michael O’Hanlon, Brookings Institute, Washington DC, USA

This book aims to provide a basic guide to the US military and will raise questions for further discussion by students.

Southeast Asian Perspectives on Power
Edited by Liana Chua, Joanna Cook, Nicholas Long and Lee Wilson, all at University of Cambridge, UK
Series: The Modern Anthropology of Southeast Asia

This volume explores the myriad manifestations, tropes and experiences of ‘power’ in contemporary Southeast Asia. The contributors address the surprising absence of direct scholarly engagement with the theme of ‘power’ in Southeast Asia given innumerable social, political and economic transformations of the region over the last half-century. The rise of postcolonial nation-states, industrialization, rapid economic growth, widespread repression and genocide, social upheaval and democratization are just some of the currents that have wrought far reaching changes across Southeast Asia.

Foreign & Commonwealth Office Publications

Series edited by Keith Hamilton and Patrick Salmon, both at Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Information Management Group, London, UK
FCO historians are responsible for editing Documents on British Policy Overseas (DBPO) and for overseeing the publication of FCO Internal Histories. DBPO comprises three series of diplomatic documents, focusing on major themes in foreign policy since 1945, and drawn principally from the records of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The latest volumes, published in Series III, are composed almost wholly of documents from within the thirty-year ‘closed period’, which would otherwise be unavailable to the public.

Since the early 1960s, several Internal Histories have been prepared by former or serving officers, the majority of which concentrated upon international developments and negotiations in which the UK has been directly involved. These were initially intended for use within the FCO, but some of the more substantial among them, studies that offer fresh insights into British diplomacy, are now being declassified for publication.

Strategic Survey 2011

The Annual Review of World Affairs

The Strategic Survey is the annual review of world affairs from the International Institute for Strategic Studies. It is an invaluable tool for interpreting world-wide strategic developments and has, since 1966, provided essential analysis of the year’s key events in international relations for government policy makers, journalists, business leaders and academics.

In the year to mid-2011, the pace of history quickened. Users of Strategic Survey 2011 will benefit from:

- a special chapter on the Arab Awakening, in which protests against autocratic rule spread like wildfire across the Arab world
- coverage of the earthquake and subsequent tsunami that killed thousands in Japan, and triggered the worst nuclear accident for twenty-five years
- commentary on the fallout of the daring raid into Pakistan by American special forces that killed Osama bin Laden, but which sparked fury in Islamabad
- analysis of the provocative military actions of the North Korean regime, China’s increasing global influence, and the crisis resulting from high food prices around the world.

Strategic Survey 2011 includes a chronology of the year’s events, essays on important policy issues, and a Strategic Geography section giving vital data on key issues - such as extreme weather and European sovereign debt - in map form. The book also includes region-by-region chapters analysing the year’s strategic developments.

The Military Balance

The Military Balance is the International Institute for Strategic Studies’ annual assessment of the military capabilities and defence economics of 170 countries worldwide. It is an essential resource for those involved in security policy making, analysis and research.

The book is a region-by-region analysis of the major military and economic developments affecting defence and security policies, and the trade in weapons and other military equipment. Comprehensive tables detail major military training activities, UN and non-UN deployments, and give data on key equipment holdings and defence expenditure trends over a ten year period.

Published annually in January.

Strategic Survey

The Annual Review of World Affairs

The Strategic Survey is the annual review of world affairs from the International Institute for Strategic Studies. It is an invaluable tool for interpreting world-wide strategic developments and has, since 1966, provided essential analysis of the year’s key events in international relations for government policy makers, journalists, business leaders and academics.

Published annually in August.

The Adelphi Series

The Adelphi series is the International Institute for Strategic Studies’ flagship contribution to policy-relevant, original academic research.

Eight books are published each year. They provide rigorous analysis of contemporary strategic and defence topics that is useful to politicians and diplomats, as well as academic researchers, foreign-affairs analysts, defence commentators and journalists.
